Meeting Set For Development Of Maryland Dairy Association

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

FREDERICK, Md. — As part of an ongoing effort by those in the Maryland dairy production industry to create a more powerful and representative force in dealing with issues affecting dairy production, an organizing committee has called a special meeting.

During a recent hearing, held in Frederick, of the 1996 Maryland Dairy Task Force, a member of the task force announced that an organizing committee is scheduled to meet 10 a.m., Nov. 26, at the New Midway Fire Hall, located along Rt. 194 (Woodsboro Pike), to consider the formation of a Maryland dairy association.

Lunch is to be served at 12:30 p.m., at a cost of $6.

To make reservations, call Wilhide immediately at (410) 775-7201, fax (410) 775-7624, if interested in attending the meeting.

According to Myron Wilhide, a Maryland dairy farmer who represented the Maryland Farm Bureau on the Task Force, there have been three dairy task forces created by the Maryland Legislature since 1993, and Wilhide served on all three.

During the hearing, Wilhide said that the findings of the 1993 Dairy Task Force included the recommendation for the formation of a dairy association to represent dairy interests in policy making.

However, he said people became confused as to the purpose for the organization because of the wordings proposed to describe such an association. He said it was assumed by many that such an organization would not be supported by the entire industry.

In the meantime, there has been no effective lobbying interest solely dedicated to representing Maryland's dairy producers.

While the Maryland State Grange, and Farm Bureau, represent dairy farmers who are also members, the representation and policy is not directed specifically on behalf of only dairy producers, according to Wilhide.

"Other ag groups have associations," Wilhide said. "We did have co-ops (representing most dairy producers), but no association to address legislation.

"We need an organized voice for dairy to provide a forum (for the debate and creation of policy ideology)," he said.

According to Wilhide, a dairy producers' association has yet to be formed since 1993, in the meantime, the dairy industry in Maryland has slipped from being the second most important agricultural industry (in terms of annual gross sales) to being third.

More Work Needed To Control Poultry Ascites

ANDY ANDREWS

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The poultry industry has to come up with better ways to diagnose ascites disease and "put this into our selection process," said Dr. Robert L. Owen, V.M.D. and director of research/development operations and veterinary services for Hubbard Farms.

Owen — the diplomate for the American College of Poultry Veterinarians and director of R&D for the Walpole, N.H.-based company — told producers Monday that as broiler companies continue to select for rapid early growth in flocks, there is a diminishing respiratory capacity for the birds, which can lead to ascites.

Owen spoke to 25 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives Monday at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Health and Management Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant.

Owen reviewed research into identifying the disease and coming up with management strategies to successfully deal with it.

Ascites (pronounced AY-sites) is simply part of a larger category of heart-related chicken health problems, including cardiopulmonary and leg disorders, according to Owen.

Veterinarians recognize ascites by the distinctive blue coloration of the bird's comb and wattles. The legs can turn blue, and there can be gross lesions with a distended abdomen holding yellow, acidic fluid.

The blue-like conditions of the bird are caused simply by a lack of enough oxygen in the blood. What kills the birds is ventricular fibrillation of the bird — the heart beats at a rapid, uncontrollable pace. The

At Whitney Harter Farm Goats Have Been Elevated To Commercial Dairy Levels

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

BELLEFONTE (Centre Co.) — When you think of goats, you may visualize a few farm pets that all look alike, eat tin cans, and keep the fence rows trimmed. Or the old adage "Contary old goat" may come to mind.

But for Danny Harter and Anne Whitney, and several hundred other farms across the East Coast, goats have been turned into a miniature dairy herd with all the trials and blessings of dairy farming.

Yes, the animals are smaller in size so that you need to handle 10 goats for every cow. The milking parlor uses calf stanchions, and the milking units have two teat cups instead of four. But it's still a seven-day-per-week, two-time-per-day, 365-day-per-year job. The sanitation and nutritional requirements are the same as a cow dairy. Goats, like cows, have a pecking order and a mind of their own which would give some credibility to the idea that goats are contrary. But so are cows.

"For some reason, a lot of people who have no ag background want to milk goats," Anne said. "They have no idea what it requires. We always ask if the interested person has goats or cows now."

In addition, you need to be prepared to make the large investment to set up a dairy that will qualify as a milk production unit if you want to have any chance at profit.

"And you need to give up emotional attachment to the animals and make decisions based on monetary value. You need to be thinking in terms of milking several hundred goats. This takes $40,000 to $50,000 investment in animals alone. And then you have the parlor, milking equipment, and bulk tank to buy."

Whitney and Harter were milking 20 goats by hand before they decided to enlarge their dairy. So they know how incredibly hard the dairy business can be. That's why they traveled from Vermont to Texas to view goat milking parlors and piece together what would be ideal for their operation.

The stanchions in the parlor are calf units with increased space between stalls. The goat pipeline milkers came from Germany, brought across customs through Canada. Ten goats are brought at one time into the linear parlor that has five milking units on line.

Feed is given at the rate of three pounds of grain per day for goats milking over nine pounds, and two pounds of grain for those milking under nine pounds. An excellent quality hay that tests 22 percent protein is purchased from Idaho. Their own 27 acres are being turned into all alfalfa with a move toward green chop to reduce labor.

Their milk is shipped by bulk truck to the Fleur De Lait Foods plant in New Holland in Lancaster County on a three or four day pickup from routes that start as far west as Ohio. Milk prices are figured on protein and time of year. The milk price ranges from $19 to $40 per hundredweight. But you don't get much milk from a goat.

Delmarva Broiler

NOVEMBER 13, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was gradually slowing as buying interest shifted to other items for the upcoming holiday. Offerings were generally adequate. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mixed in a range of light to heavy, mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 61 to 75 cents. Trade sentiment was steady. In the parts complex, wings were short of an active buying interest. Breast items, particularly boneless skinless were building to a limited inquiry. Where leg quarters were available they were often slow in clearing.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
NOVEMBER 13, 1996

Wheat bids climbed higher due to continued reactions from yesterday's reduced ending stocks estimate by USDA and fairly good export sales overnight. Corn and soybean bids were mixed. Wheat 2 to 11 cents higher. Corn mixed. Sorghum 7 to 9 cents higher. Soybeans mixed. Wheat bids were moderately higher as the Philippines purchase wheat overnight. Indications are Egypt is looking for 300,000 tonnes of optional-origin wheat today but it's not expected to come from the US. Spillover strength from yesterday's USDA Stocks Report was noted. Good export demand for corn overnight offered some support to corn bids but the soybean meal sales were't enough to boost bean bids very high. Cold temperatures and freezing rain forecast for the Midwest areas over the next few days, weighed on bids. The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

NOVEMBER 18-24, 1996

FULL BEAVER MOON, NOV. 24.

PINECONES & WHITE BIRCH

These fall days are ideal for gathering the large pinecones that make great winter kindling for the fireplace Dip in scented wax for a colorful and fragrant fire Consider, too, cutting a stack of beautiful white birch logs for a more decorative laying of the fire. If you have city friends with fireplaces, wrap a red ribbon around a giant Yule log as a seasonal gift With some adult supervision, children can drill candle-diameter holes in the length of a small birch log to make a holiday centerpiece for the table Embellish with some pine boughs and small pinecones, tuck in some colorful straw flowers for Thanksgiving, or add small gold balls and a red ribbon for the December holidays. Insert candles and enjoy!

Not what we give, but what we share, for the gift without the giver is bare. - J R Lowell

TIP OF THE WEEK

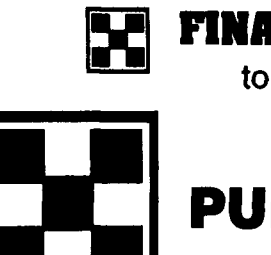
Before the holidays, weed out old toys and clothing to donate to local thrift shops, Goodwill, or Salvation Army.

DO-AHEAD CRANBERRY RELISH

2 cups fresh cranberries
1 small onion
3/4 cup sour cream
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons horseradish

Grind cranberries and onion in meat grinder or food processor Stir in remaining ingredients Freeze in ice cube tray or plastic container Defrost when ready to use, whip it with a whisk, and serve

Makes 8 to 10 servings, as a condiment.



The Old Farmer's Weather Proverbs

A heavy November snow will last until April.

When you take up the teapot and find sparks on the bottom, it is a sign of cold weather.

If there's ice in November that will bear a duck, there'll be nothing after but sleet and muck.

Thunder in November, a fertile year to come.

OPINION

Mining Now More Hazardous Than Ag

Last month Poultry Times reported that the National Safety Council figures show that agriculture is no longer the most hazardous industry.

Mining is.

Thanks to the studious, consistent, and ongoing efforts of Penn State (and other state) Extension offices, producers are becoming more aware of the dangers of farming and have taken steps to ensure that farming becomes a lot more safe.

National Safety Council (NSC) statistics show agriculture with a work-related death rate of 24 per 100,000 workers, compared with mining's 30 per 100,000 and construction's 16 per 100,000 workers.

Because of new technologies and improved designs, farm machinery is safer. Also, efforts by extension educators, teachers, and ag businesses have paid off to improve overall safety.

There's one caveat, however. Tractor runovers and rollovers still are a problem, especially on the older machinery not equipped with rollover protection structures. Also, a large portion of deaths on the farm occur to children below the age of 14 — and some producers still allow kids to ride on the tractor fender.

Simple rule: allow no extra riders. That includes cabs, because children can still fall out of them and get run over and tragically injured.

But we congratulate the efforts of extension and ag educators who still emphasize the importance of farm machinery safety to students of all ages. The lessons are important for everyone.

To Finish Harvesting Crops Safely

Past records suggest that approximately 10 Pennsylvania farmers will be killed between October and December.

This is the time of year when harvesting crops may become a bit more hazardous for various reasons. These reasons include fewer hours of daylight; colder, rawer work days; and wet weather, causing harvesting delays and, as a result, farmers are more likely to encounter muddy fields. Other reasons include cornstalks begin to lean or topple over, thus harvesting is slower and more frustrating and school-related activities diminish the time younger family members have to help with field work and chores.

There is a natural tendency to start hurrying more, become frustrated, and to take unsafe shortcuts to complete the harvesting. Farmers may also try to press into service workers (family or others) who lack experience and the ability to make good judgments and have not received adequate safety instruction or supervision.

To Follow Harvesting Safety Rules

If you are still working at harvesting your crops, consider the following safety rules.

Pushing yourself to the limit each day increases the chance that you will make a mistake, leading to serious injury. Take short breaks to keep yourself warm, mentally fresh, or to prevent your body from stiffening up. You will be more productive in the long run.

If warm clothing is needed, be sure it fits snugly and does not have dangling straps. Wear layers of clothing rather than a single large and bulky piece. Be in visual or verbal contact with someone every couple of hours.

Farmers can die of complications from injuries, rather than the injury event. This happens when farmers become incapacitated and cannot alert someone that they need help.

Before deliberately taking a risk, such as unplugging a machine without disengaging the PTO, ask yourself if your loved ones would want you to take that risk.

To Be Aware Of Carbon Monoxide

Columbia Gas newsletter recently discussed carbon monoxide dangers.

It noted as we start heating our homes, barns, shops and work areas and tightly sealing them against the cold, we need to be mindful of the potential dangers of carbon monoxide or CO.

This is because carbon monoxide give no warning of its presence. It is colorless and odorless.

Many sources of carbon monoxide exist. Exhaust fumes from cars, trucks, and tractors are one common source. Anything that burns fossil fuels can allow carbon monoxide to invade the air. These include improperly installed or ventilated gas heaters, wood stoves, kerosene heaters, or charcoal grills.

The family vehicle left idling in an attached garage can produce enough carbon monoxide to cause illness or even death. More than two-thirds of the accidental deaths from carbon monoxide are caused by inadequately vented motor vehicle exhaust and coal, kerosene or wood burned in a poorly ventilated fireplace or stove.

Carbon monoxide detectors can be purchased. They are simple to install and use.

THE VIEW FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE PIT
November 17, 1996

Background Scripture:
Lamentations
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 13:1-6

A young man the other day called me to tell me his wife had started divorce proceedings. Several months ago, she had pleaded with him to go with her for counseling and he had refused. "I don't have a problem," he had told her, "but if you do, go ahead." Now, she has decided to end the marriage. The tragedy is that the young man now acknowledges that he does have a serious problem and now he is getting help. But it would appear that it is too late to save the marriage.

Unfortunately, now, at the bottom of the emotional heap, he sees clearly what he would not see before. Often, many of us have the same problem. In the midst of a tragedy-in-the-making many of us are blind to reality. Our inner defenses and emotions blur our vision. And, if we ever see clearly again, sometimes it is too late to repair the damage.

Lamentations is a book of dirges by and for a people who began to see more clearly only after it was too late to save the past. It is both a beautiful and depressing book — beautiful in its poetic imagery, depressing in the depths of its mournful laments. "How lonely sits the city that was full of people!" it begins, "How like a widow she has become, she that was great among the nations!" (1:1).

IN RUINS

The lament is over a Jerusalem that lies in ruins and humiliation. "Is it nothing to you, all you who pass by? Look and see if there is any sorrow like my sorrow," (1:12). When you read it, you may conclude that it is all pretty much of one piece. But, read carefully and you will find that there are a number of different themes that are all part of the human grief experience.

The one theme that we find throughout is that of anguish over what has happened to Jerusalem. We cannot read without sharing in the horror which they experienced, the rock bottom of which is found in 4:10, "The hands of compassionate women have boiled their own children." In the midst of famine, the people practiced cannibalism!

The most recurrent theme is complaint against God. In 3:37-39, "Who has commanded and it came to pass, unless the Lord has ordained it? Is it not from the mouth of the Most High that good and evil come?" Lamentations also speaks repeatedly of God's wrath: "How the Lord in his anger has set the daughter of Zion under a cloud!" (2:1).

Shocking! we may say. But not uncommon. Frankly, I'm glad that writer(s) had the honesty to record this very human reaction. When we face disaster, do we not sometimes wonder how God can allow such a thing to happen — even if we have brought it upon ourselves.

FORGOTTEN FOREVER?

Another negative emotion honestly expressed is that of abandonment. In fact, the book closes on this note of mixed hope and anxiety: "But thee, O Lord, dost reign forever . . . why dost thou forget us forever, why dost thou so long forsake us? Restore us to thyself, O Lord . . . Or has thou utterly rejected us? (5:19-22).

The most important theme is that of confession and penitence: ". . . woe to us, for we have sinned" (5:16). Lamentations is a poignant expression of a nation's grief process or mourning to penitence or, as one writer put it, of lament and repent. We cannot change the past, but we can seize the present moment to repent and change the future.

And there is from the Lord a word of comfort in the midst of their agony: "I called on thy name, O Lord, from the depths of the pit; thou didst hear my plea . . . Thou didst come near when I called on thee; thou didst say, 'Do not fear!'" (3:55-57).

Lebanon Conservation District Recognizes Achievements

From the left, Jan Patrick, representing the Hershey Pasta Group, receives a Special Recognition Conservation Award presented to the company for its cooperation and support of the Lebanon County Conservation District and the envirothon competition; while Dr. Betty R. Conner, of Lebanon, receives a plaque honoring her as Lebanon County Conservationist of the Year for her long-time and continuing efforts.

From the left, Peggy and John Schott are presented with the Lebanon County Conservation District's Conservation Landowner of the Year Award in recognition of their long list of soil and water conservation practices, in addition to donating the conservation easement on 25-acres of their 60-head sheep farm to the county; while Miriam and Dean Patches, hold the Chesapeake Bay Clean Water Farm Award in recognition of their conservation efforts, including stream bank fencing and no-till practices.

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Conservation District held its annual county conservation awards banquet last week at the Quality Inn, in Lebanon.

A meeting of the district county board of directors was held immediately following the awards banquet.

Four awards were presented during the banquet, with Charles Wertz, district director, conducting the annual review and awards ceremony.

Chesapeak Bay Clean Water Farm Award

Dean R. and Miriam Patches, who farm in North Lebanon Township, were presented with the district's Chesapeake Bay Clean Water Farm award.

The third generation farm was purchased by Issaic Patches in 1950 and is located in the Bunker Hill subwatershed of the Swatara Creek drainage in Lebanon County. The Swatara Creek empties into the Susquehanna River in Middletown.

The farm is bisected by two tributary streams and in 1994, through a state Department of Environmental Protection streambank fencing program, 3,075 feet of bank was installed.

A concrete water trough fed by an active spring was installed in a pasture with strategic placement to help prevent soil erosion or the creation of a poor environment for cattle.

The Patches have also installed a manure lagoon, and updated an active nutrient management plan that incorporates such things as soil tests and the use of feed consultants.

The fields are constructed with conservation strip of alfalfa and no-till soybean and corn fields.

The Patches have also installed more than 1,000 feet of subsurface drainage, as well as such conservation drainage on rented neighboring land. Dean also serves as chairman of the county Farmland Preservation Board, which has helped to secure the conservation easements on 16 farms in the county.

Wertz showed slides of some of the conservation devices installed on the farm, and said that the Patches, "set a fine example not only for Lebanon County, but for the state."

Conservationist Of Year

Dr. Betty R. Conner, of Lebanon, was named Lebanon County Conservationist of the Year in recognition of her long-time efforts.

Wertz cited her dilligent attendance as a non-voting member of the county district board of directors, her current and continued position as national resource director for the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters (1989-present), and her many involvements with conservation organizations and efforts.

Whitney Harter Farm

A concentration of Nubians and Alpines are in the herd for their different milk and protein production characteristics. Other breeds in milk include Saanens and LaManchas.

Because goats have not been bred for dairy production, dairy goat farmers find it hard to locate additions and replacements with high production. At Whitney Harter Farm, DHIA records are kept on each animal to assess production and nutrition needs. The farm won Pennsylvania DHIA's top goat dairy herd management award last year.

All animals are registered with the American Goat Association and a few show animals are exhibited each year. A goat of show type would be long and straight on top, with good legs and feet, high, wide rear udder, and a lot of dairy character. The cow dairy type score card has been adapted for goats with consideration to breed characteristics.

At present, Danny does the milking morning and evening and works a 40-hour week off the farm. Anne takes care of the daily herd management. But in a few years, Danny will be able to retire from his off-farm job and at that time he wants to milk goats full-time.

"It's just what I really like to do," Danny said.

The milking goats receive grain in the milking parlor according to production.

Danny Harter and Anne Whitney pose with their dairy herd.

Danny Harter milks 125 goats with five units in this linear parlor that houses 10 animals at a time.

Her involvments can be outlined according to the focus of conservation effort.

As far as watershed protection organizations, she is a co-founder of the Citizens for Clean Water, a Swatara Watershed Alliance, which is now called the Swatara Creek Watershed Association; a member of that organization's board of directors; and a member of the Chesapeake Bay Advisory Committee to the State Conservation Commission.

In her drinking water protection efforts, Conner is a member of the DEP Small Water Systems Technical Assistance Center board of directors; a member of the Pennsylvania Utilities Commission Water Industry Collaborative Work Group; a member of the Captial Region Water board of directors; a member of the League of Women Voters Pennsylvania Water Resources Education Network; and a member of the Lebanon County Groundwater Education team.

Her memberships associated with recreation and habitat preservation, she is a member of the Pennsylvania River Resources Council; a member of the Quittie Creek Nature Park Committee, and Friends of Old Annville; a member of the Lebanon County Rails-to-Trails organization; and a member of the Friends of the Union Canal Tunnel Park.

In other related memberships, she is with the Pennsylvania Environmental Council board of directors and on the steering committee for the "10,000 Friends of Pennsylvania;" the Susquehanna Conference board of directors; the Southcentral Environmental Roundtable; DEP's Waste Management Citizens Advisory Committee; a member of the Lebanon County Solid Waste Advisory Committee (1989-90), and past president of the Lebanon County chapter of the Leaque of Women Voters (1985-87).

Conner has a bachelors degree in biology and chemistry from the Northwestern University, a master's in bacteriology from University of Illinois; and a doctorate in microbiology from Penn State University. She worked from 1979-1988 in the Department of Surgery at Penn State University.

"We appreciate all that expertise that she brings," Wertz said, adding that Conner currently volunteers to represent the county conservation district on various committees.

Conservation Landowner Of Year

Joseph and Peggy Schott, of North Cornwall Township, were presented with the Lebanon County Conservation Landowner of the Year award in recognition of their donation of 26-acres of development easements to the county in an effort to preserve farmland.

The Schotts have about a 60-head sheep operation on the land, and are recognized for donating the farmland protecting easements valued at more than $67,000 to the county.

Wertz noted that the parcel of farmland the Schotts donated is critical because is lies on the south side of Rt. 422, and acts as a buffer from the extreme pressure from developers and investors who seek to use the farmlands for high-profit development, and are not prevented from doing so; although adequate sewer and water are questionable, and much of the water in the city and southern end is currentlyt being either pumped from the north end of the county and parts of Schuylkill County, or being drawn from groundwater resources, which have associated in significantly reduced flows and annual drying of stream beds, in recent years.

According to Wertz, the Schotts have been inquiring about preserving that specific property, and others, since 1993.

Wertz called the Schott property, the "guardian of the outer perimeter" of souther Lebanon County prime farmland.

Special Recognition

The Hershey Pasta Group was presented with a special recognition award for conservation to recognize the ongoing support by the group for allowing its employees to participate in conservation district activities, such as the county envirothon competition and educational programs, and financial support for such activities. It has also been receptive to discussions concerning land-use activities.

It was also given in recognition of a land donation it made to the Union Canal Park.

Jan Patrick accepted the award on behalf of the Pasta Group. Not present was Bob Arnold, an employee who represents the group in the envirothon and also serves as a representative of the Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsman Clubs.

Others recognized for their volunteer efforts include Tammy Granger, Genevieve Mehler, Karen Light, James Logan Jr., Steve Kurtz, Dian Beamesderfer, Joan Keener, Pattie Maulfair, Sue Miller, and Rosene Bollinger.

Minor Appointed To USDA Ag Board

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Samuel F. Minor, a dairy farmer from Washington, Pa., and an alumnus of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, has been appointed to the newly created National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced Minor's appointment last month. Authorized by the 1996 Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform (FAIR) Act, the board will advise the secretary and land-grant colleges and universities on agricultural research, extension, education and economics policy and priorities.

"On behalf of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, it is my pleaseure to congratulate Mr. Minor on this distinguished and important honor," says Dr. Theodore Alter, interim dean of the college.

For the past several years, Minor also has been one of the college's two delegates to the Council for Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching, or CARET. He currently serves as vice chairman of the national advocacy group, which works for federal appropriations to support the land-grant university system.

Samuel Minor

Minor graduated from Penn State in 1960 with a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics and was named an Alumni Fellow by Penn State in 1989.

He and his wife, Beverly, own and operate the Springhouse, a 430-acre dairy farm, retail farm market and restaurant in Washington. They have five children, several of whom are also involved in the family business.

Minor worked as field operations manager with Eastern A.I. Cooperative and as marketing manager for Carnation Company's Genetics Division before entering farming full-time in 1975. Minor was elected to the Agway Board of Directors in 1987 and currently serves on the board's financial services and executive and planning committees.

He is active in many agricultural organizations and is a past president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, a director of Farm Credit West Central A.C.P., a director of Washington/Greene County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, a member and past president of the Washington County Cooperative Extension Association, and a member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and Pennsylvania Grange.

The National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board replaces three U.S. Department of Agriculture boards: the Agricultural Science and Technology Review Board, the Joint Council on Food and Agricultural Sciences, and the National Agricultural Research and Extension Users Advisory Board.

Members were selected after USDA solicited nominations from more than 600 organizations as part of a nationwide search that produced more than 400 nominees. Terms range from one to three years.

The board's first meeting was held in September in Washington, D.C. The USDA Research, Education, and Economics Division will provide support for the advisory board.

Maryland DHIA Report For September

The September Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

Lancaster Holstein Club Recognizes Members' Achievements

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Holstein Breeders Association held its annual banquet and meeting Thursday night at the Solanco Fairgrounds in Quarryville.

In addition to the election of new directors, the association presented outstanding production awards to adult and youth members, and heard from representatives from the state Holstein Association, as well as the national association.

Tom Moses, with the Holstein Association USA, was an unexpected guest, accompanying Clarence Stauffer to the meeting, before leaving Friday to attend the annual Virginia Holstein Association meeting.

Moses talked briefly to the about 70 people in attendance, urging them to try to attend their annual winter meetings and annual conventions.

He also asked that they take advantage of the "kitchen meeting" format that the association has for members, in order to discuss changes in the organization.

According to Moses, while the board of directors has been meeting to discuss possible changes, the organization can only do what membership desires if membership participates in discussions.

Several issues currently require membership input, and are at the forefront of change for the association.

National News

He said he had been at a national directors' board meeting the night prior, and while that meeting typically is concerned with budgeting, other major issues of concern were discussed.

Financially, he said there is concern because, while expenses have dropped for the association, so have revenues and revenues have dropped faster than expenses. He said it bodes for a probable slight increase in registration fees, but whether that becomes true is up to members.

He said that for the first time in 10 years the association may have to raise its registration fees, but by a small amount.

Another area of change that needs membership involvement is a proposal to change the association's herd book. According to Moses, there is a proposal that would create one herd book, but it wouldn't be a combining of the association's Qualified Book with its purebred book.

The change would be alter 111 years of the association's regular herd book identification. The new method of identifying the pedigree of an animal would be according to percentage of purity.

Currently, and in the future, all animals registered as purebred Hoslteins under the Holstein Association USA herd book are considered to be 100 percent Holstein. The lineage of all purebreds goes back to the beginning of the book.

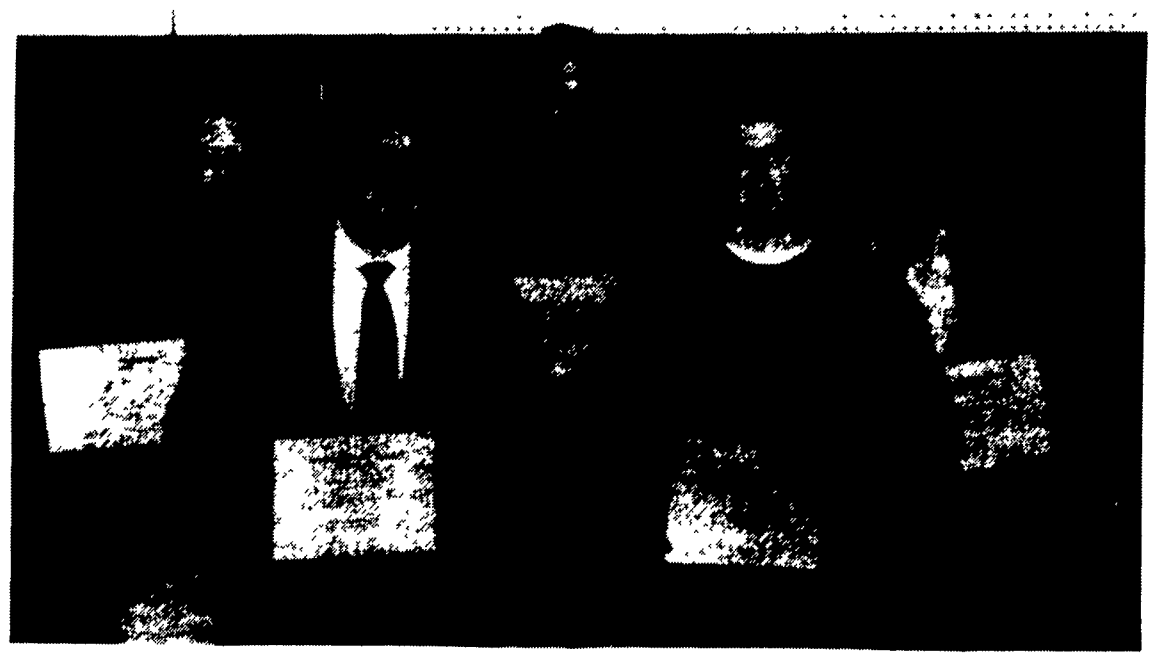
But several years ago, efforts were underway to try to recognize some outstanding Holsteins that may have not have had registered dams and sires for several generations, or may have a mixed heritage.

As a result of that effort, in 1993, the association created a Qualified Book to recognize those cattle and to allow their offspring to be able to develop a breeding pedigree.

The new concept is to association level of purity to registered Holsteins through the association of a percentage.

Key to maintaining the distinction between a purebred and a nonpure pedigree is that when an animal's breed "purity" is determined according to percentage, the number is always rounded down.

That way, an animal that doesn't completely descend from registered stock can never attain the 100-percent designation.



From the left, Eugene Hess, Marvin Stoltzfus, Dale Hershey, Tom Barley, and Joseph Wivell receive plaques in recognition of having the high-production winners among members of the Lancaster Holstein Breeders Association.

Therefore, in this way, one source of registration identification can be kept for all registered cattle, while still keeping the recognized registered purebred animals from being confused with those that may be carrying some genetic material from a different breed, or from grade animals.

He also noted that the national Dairy Herd Improvement Association is geared up to officially change its production records system on Jan. 1 to one where the end-users of test production information are responsible for determining the accurancy and usability of that information.

It allows whatever records testing to be allowed for use, putting responsibility for determining whether the data is questionable up to the end-user, such as the national Holstein Association.

The Holstein Association is also on the verge of beginning a national pilot program for animal identification that would not just encompass the Holstein breed, but all large livestock.

The program resulted from a need to better identify animals, and also to help with better traceability of an animal from farm to slaughterhouse.

According to Moses, the basic proposal for the system is incorporated in federal farm legislation that has been approved, but is in the regulatory and detail-working part of being implemented.

What is key in that legislation, however, is that the Holstein Association USA was cited as being the premier animal identification organization in the world, and is targeted for conducting a pilot program.

Moses said that the pilot program most likely will involved several farms, slaughter houses and DHIAs. The goal is to be able, through the application of a 12-digit animal identification number that would be a combination of a serial number and a code identifying place of origin, to trace an animal completely from birth to death and from specific farm to slaughterhouse.

The concept is that the identification program would be used for all livestock and would help with the overall goal of ensuring food safety, livestock disease prevention and containment.

Very possibly, the Holstein Association could serve as the non-governmental organization soley in charge of the animal identification system, which has several implications for the health of the organization.

Moses also said that the board of directors discussed changes in the Holstein governmental structure. The goal of the directors is to have more direct exchange with members of ideas about issues important to all members.

He said the board is looking at regionalizing some of the administrative and membership structure of the organization.

Brian Mull stands with high quality show calf he won in the annual contest by the Lancaster Holstein Breeders Association meeting.

But for any of these issues to be settled requires debate and discussion and ultimately the board acceptance of a program that is beneficial to members.

Moses urged all members to consider requesting the "kitchen table" meetings that were promoted last year, in lieu of the annual winter meetings.

The winter meetings had been suffering from lack-luster attendance, though those who did attend were consistent. In an attempt to get better communication with membership, the association last year started a program of conducting small informal meetings of groups from a handful to two dozen.

The meetings can be arranged by a local member who may be able to serve as host for some of his neighbors, and they can be held anywhere there is room.

Any member wanting more information on the meetings, or the association should call 1-800-952-5200.

State News

In state association business, William Allen, director of sales for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, said a lot is happening at the state level as the association regroups following some problems with a sale. Allen works out of the association's Middletown farm where animals for export and other sales are collected and tested for shipment.

Allen said that 114 head of Hoslteins left Monday for Egypt out of 177 purchased for the sale. Those that didn't make the selection for Egypt were sold in the Midwest, he said.

A pending shipment of Holsteins to Saudi Arabia is scheduled for early 1997, while he said there exists a chance of another shipment to Japan.

He said that the association is looking for donors for bull contracts to Japan, also. He said that anyone who thinks they might have a good donor should fax the pedigree to the office.

Also, animals are still being accepted on consignment for the state Holstein convention set to be held in Reading at the Sheraton Inn, Feb. 20-22. The Junior Holstein convention is to be held at the same location, but earlier, from Feb.7-9.

Heather Brubaker receives an award for having the highest milk-producing 3-year-old.

Club Awards

In adult production awards, the Lancaster Holstein Club recognized several members.

Eugene and Sue Hess had the highest milk, fat and protein producing junior 2-year-old for the year. Their Hessdale Tesk Melisa, sired by Tesk-Holm Valiant Ricky, made 30,293 pounds of milk, 1,043 pounds of fat, and 938 pounds of protein in a 305-day lactation.

Dale and Debbie Hershey had two cows win their respective age class for production.

Certified Crop Advisers: The New Breed Of Farm Consultants

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As the stranglehold of environmentalism and consumer protection envelops the fields of the nation's farms, decisions behind the farm gate are rapidly expanding beyond the traditional intuitive methods of plowing, planting, and harvesting. Today, the farmer must operate within the confines of nutrient management considerations, herbicide and pesticide label-use restrictions, and water and air quality controls.

Common farming practices such as the application of fertilizers, spraying for bugs and weeds, and the spreading of manure, have become daily life and death benchmarks of survival for the farming operation.

When a government agency finds a contaminated underground water supply, or the farmer's urban neighbors take offense at his spraying operation, or the smell of his hogs, the farmer must be prepared to defend his actions.

In these new environment-gone-wild field restrictions, the farmer needs strict compliance with all laws and regulations. And meticulous records of this strict compliance must be kept, because sooner or later, every farmer will be called upon to prove his operation is not the culpert in some public-sensetive infraction of society's increasingly stringent environmental protection acts.

Into this new farm age, many commercial sales people who travel the rural roads from farm to farm have taken on more service responsibilities. In addition to selling their company's products, this new breed of salesperson has become a farm consultant to help farmers with farm decisions related to environmental requirements. In fact, whole new businesses have appeared that send consultants out to do nothing but manage individual farmer field operations and insure best management practices with proper environmental protection controls.

As this farming phenomenon evolves, the need for a system to help the crop consultants stay informed has grown too. If they are to make these weighty recommendations to their farm clients, and may also be held accountable if a problem arrises in the field, the consultant must be qualified to do the job.

Today, help for crop advisors is available across the nation. A national American Registery of Certified Professionals in Agronomy, Crops, and Soils (ARCPACS) is functioning, as well as regional Certified Crop Adviser (CCA) units in 44 states, including Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, and West Virginia; New York and the New England States; many cornbelt states, and of course in Pennsylvania.

The CCA program in Pennsylvani was started in late 1991 to certify both professionals at the college level and other advisors to farmers who did not have degrees but had access to the farmers through their sales and other business contacts.

The certification program requires the consultant to have field experience, as well as pass both the national and state certification test. Stringent standards and ethics requirements include proper dealing with the farmer and continuing education. Both are required to become certified and to keep the certification status.

If a person meets the requirements for certification, he or she has shown profeciency in soil fertility, crop production, soil and water management, intergrated pest management, and comprehension of the regulations. Farmers who look for someone to help with regulatory interpretation and best crop practices have the assurance that a CCA has met the requirements to be certified and must maintain a committment to ethically do his job.

In respect to the farmers, the CCAs have prepared themselves at great expense of money and time to give the best and most knowledgable recommendations available. Many of these CAAs also keep the necessary records for the farmer to insure proof of compliance should a legal question arise.

Agway Focused On Growth, Profitability

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Several hundred producer-members of Agway met at the Hotel Syracuse in Syracuse, N.Y. recently to take part in the 32nd Agway Annual Meeting.

In his report to member-stockholders, Donald P. Cardarelli, Agway president and chief executive officer, said that "fiscal year 1996 was a year of significant achievement and progress for Agway."

The agricultural cooperative previously announced net earnings for the 12 months ended June 30, 1996 of $11.6 million, on total sales of $1.66 billion. This compares with fiscal year 1995's net loss of $15.9 million, on total sales of $1.59 billion.

Cardarelli reported that Agway investors were paid over $36 million in interest and dividends during this year.

"We now focused on doing two things: growing each of our businesses and improving the profitability of agriculture for our producer-members and other customers," said Cardarelli.

Cardarelli reported that a changed business strategy implemented in early 1995 for the cooperative's core agricultural products business was working. That strategy moved decision making and accountability closer to the customer level. As a result, Agway Agricultural Products experienced significant financial improvement year-to-year and posted unit volume increases in feed, seed, fertilizer and crop protectants.

Significant financial improvements were also realized in Agway's retail operations. Agway stores are focused on three primary product lines: yard and garden, pet foot and pet supplies, and farm products. "We are selling what we are known for," Cardarelli told second spot in terms of agricultural strength in Maryland, behind poultry.

He noted that dairy producers in Maryland pay a lot of money in mandatory promotion funds to support the Maryland market for dairy products, but in-state producers have nothing but diluted representation on policy issues affected them, and are losing their historic share of the market to outside suppliers.

During the task force hearing, Wilhide had distributed pamphlets describing the planned meeting.

Scheduled presentations are to be from Boyd Cook, of the Maryland Dairy Task Force; John Noble, representing the Northeast Dairy Producers Association; Dale Gardner and Jack Hardesty, representing the Virginia State Dairyman's Association; Gerald Truitt Jr., representing the Delmarva poultry industry; and Norman Astle, representing the Maryland Farm Bureau.

The front of the pamphlet has an illustration of the front end of a Holstein cow, and above it, the statement: "An organized voice for Maryland dairy producers."

Beneath the cow's head and in front of its feet, in smaller type is: "Why your support is needed to help create a Maryland Dairy Association."

The text inside states, "Maryland dairy producers are not presently represented by a single commodity association. Such an organization would be dedicated solely to uniting Maryland dairy producers, strengthening the industry's competitiveness and profitability, and improving the quality of life on Maryland dairy farms.

"The organization would provide a united dairy producer voice."

The text that follows acknowledges that cooperatives and cattle breed organizations, and such, represent their members, but that doesn't necessarily mean that those policies developed from those organizations are sensitive to the specific needs of Maryland dairy producers.

(The suggestion of the text is that it's very possible to have a large regional dairy producer organization have more out-of-state members than in-state members, and thus develop policies that, in the name of doing what is best for the overall organization, actually conflict with the survival of its in-state members, if not speed their demise.)

The pamphlet also provides data supporting the fact that while the market for milk in Maryland has not diminished, the amount of Maryland-produced milk feeding that market is going down.

In other words, Maryland has the dairy culture, history, climatic conditions, soil, natural environment, and large, very close in-state market that would seemingly support a more self-sustaining dairy production/processing/marketing sector.

But, instead — despite higher fuel and associated hauling costs and regulations to ship outside milk into Maryland, which would seem to make in-state production more profitable — there are factors shifting the balance of profitability outside of the state.

During the hearing, Wilhide made the connection between the necessity to preserve Maryland dairy farming operations, not just because of dairy producer self-interest, but because of all the additional side-benefits to the entire Maryland community.

A list of purposes for organizing, other than creating a Maryland dairy producer-specific political and educational body, includes providing a means to work with other Maryland agricultural commodity groups in addressing common issues of interest; providing input to guide research and education programs relevant to the dairy industry; promoting the dairy industry; and promoting profitability and quality of life for dairy producers.

According to the pamphlet, "The organizing committee has a goal of attracting 75 percent of the dairy producers and allied industry representatives" to the meeting.

"If this meeting generates sufficient positive interest among Maryland's dairy producers, then the organizing committee will begin to establish the new organization."

Top-end technology. Bottom-line thinking.

Dairy Cooperative Inc. Elects Executive Committee

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Clyde Rutherford of Otego, N.Y., was re-elected president of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., following the conclusion of the cooperative's annual meeting, held recently in Liverpool, N.Y.

Rutherford, who is also the Cooperative's District 9 director, serves as the secretary-treasurer of the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF). In addition, he is a member of the Executive Committee and chairman of the Dairy Stabilization Committee Task Force for the NMPF.

Regionally, Rutherford is on the board of directors of O-AT-KA Milk Products Cooperative Inc.; vice chairman of the board of directors of Atlantic Processing Inc.; and a director and member of the Executive Committee of Empire Livestock Marketing Inc.

Rutherford and his wife, Jeannette, operate a 500-acre dairy farm which produces 1.8 million pounds of milk annually.

Four other Dairylea members were re-elected to the Executive Committee.

Warren Beardsley of Penfield, N.Y., was re-elected to serve as the cooperative's first vice president. Beardsley, Dairylea's District 3 director, manages a 165-cow Holstein herd with help from three of his sons, Lenny, Larry and Donald. They grow 500 acres of corn, hay and wheat on their Monroe County farm.

Beardsley is very active in a number of other agricultural organizations. He is a director of the National Milk Producers Federation, and a member of the New York Farm Bureau, Agway Inc. and the Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA).

Beardsley also serves as vice president of the Health Foundation and the Dairy Council, and is a former director of O-AT-KA Milk Products Cooperative Inc.

In addition, Beardsley is a director of the Western New York Bargaining Agency and is a New York State district director for the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc.

Raymond Diebold of Altoona, the Cooperative's District 6 director, was re-elected second vice president and secretary.

In addition to his responsibilities as a Dairylea director, Diebold is a director on the Pennsylvania State Farmland Preservation Board; a member of the Altoona/Blair County Farm City Week Committee; and Dairylea's representative on both the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Commodity Board. He also serves on the agricultural advisory committees to Sen. Robert Jubelier (R-Altoona, Pa.) and Dr. Ted Alter, dean of the College of Agriculture at The Pennsylvania State University.

Diebold owns and operates a 135-acre farm with his wife, Judy, and their three children, Kenneth, Kevin and Karen. They manage 85 registered Holsteins with an annual herd average of 21,000 pounds of milk.

James Madigan of Towanda, was re-elected to serve as the cooperative's treasurer. Madigan, Dairylea's District 5 director, operates a 450-acre Bradford County farm in partnership with his mother, Ruth Norton. He milks 100 Holsteins and Brown Swiss with his wife, Terri, and sons, Jason and Byron.

Madigan is active in his community. He is a member of the Troy Area School District and previously served as its president. Madigan is also president of the Sul-Bra Co-op Council, the local council of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives, and is a member of Agway, Farm Credit, the Bradford-Sullivan County Farm Bureau Dairy Committee, and the Claverack Rural Electric Co-op. In addition, Madigan recently became a director of the National Milk Producers Federation.

Previously, Madigan served on the advisory council for the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives Director School, the Dairy Promotion Committee of Bradford County, and as a district committee member of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program.

Raymond Johnson of Schaghticoke, N.Y., was re-elected Dairylea's assistant treasurer. Johnson, who is also the cooperative's District 12 director, farms in partnership with his son Ed on 45-acre Duelwood Farm, which is home to 100 milking Holsteins. The family farm, where Johnson and his wife, Estella, reside, dates back to 1928.

Additionally, Johnson has served as president of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. for the past 13 years. Currently, he serves as a director of Dairy Management Inc., and is second vice president of the United Dairy Industry Association (UDIA). Johnson is also a member of the UDIA Personnel and Finance Committees and past chairman of the Research Committee of the National Dairy Board.

Dairylea is a Syracuse-based, agricultural service organization, cooperatively owned by dairy farmers throughout the Northeast. It markets more than 4.5 billion pounds of milk annually and participates, and is invested in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

DAYCO SUPER II V-BELTS

Now there's a belt that beats the toughest drive problems.

Many heavy-duty industrial machines demand more than conventional wrapped v-belts can stand. Their punishing drives make ordinary belts crack under pressure. The result: unnecessary and expensive downtime.

Now there's a solution to the consistent, costly problem of replacing or retensioning belts. It's the revolutionary new Super II™ v-belt from Dayco. The Super II belt was designed specifically for the most brutal applications. And its performance blows the cover off conventional wrapped belts.

In heavy torque, high horsepower and extreme shock load comparisons, it's not even a contest. The Super II v-belt is stronger, more flexible, and lasts far longer.

Innovative design & construction provide extra strength and stamina

The secret to the Super II v-belt's durability is its unique construction. The central position of the polyester cords in the neoprene rubber core provides greater strength, balance and longer life. Multiple fabric plies top and bottom enhance flexibility. And Dayco's unique raw-edged construction gives it a better grip for controlled slippage.

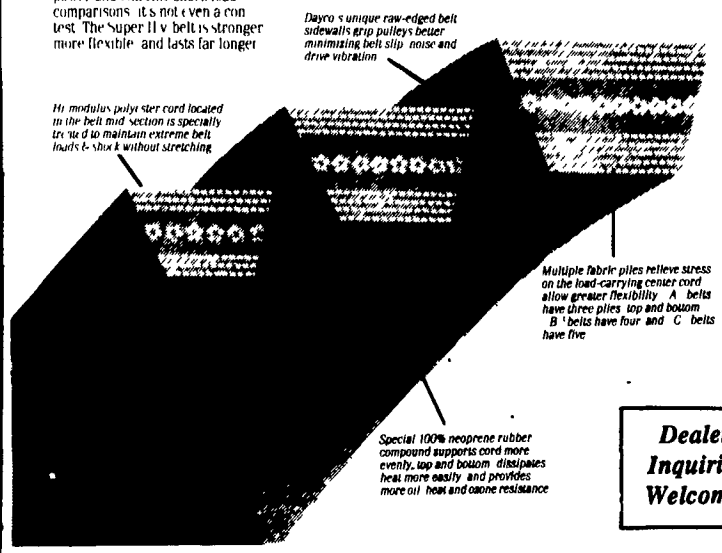
These attributes combined make the Super II belt superior to conventional wrapped belts in every way.

Test the Super II v-belt on your toughest drive

The Super II v-belt was field tested for two years on the most severe applications: rock quarry shaker screens, lumber mill tree debarkers and pipe descalers. In every case, it outperformed conventional wrapped belts by a wide margin. But the only test that really counts is the one you do on your own equipment.

Try the Super II belt on your toughest drive problem. You'll be so amazed by its incredible endurance that you'll want to put it on all your drives. In fact, we're so sure you'll be pleased with the performance of the Super II v-belt that in the unlikely event you're not satisfied, we'll refund the original purchase price, or replace it with a conventional wrapped v-belt.

The Super II v-belt from Dayco. The super problem solver.



Dayco's unique raw-edged belt sidewalls grip pulleys better minimizing belt slip, noise and drive vibration
Hi modulus polyester cord located in the belt mid section is specially treated to maintain extreme belt loads & shock without stretching
Multiple fabric plies relieve stress on the load-carrying center cord allow greater flexibility. A belts have three plies top and bottom. B belts have four and C belts have five
Special 100% neoprene rubber compound supports cord more evenly, top and bottom dissipates heat more easily and provides more oil, heat and ozone resistance

Agway members. He also reported that the company will continue to upgrade store appearances, improve product merchandising and carry more Agway-branded products.

Cardarelli also reported improved earnings for the company's Country Products Group and Telmark, a highly successful lease financing subsidiary which operates in 26 states. Agway Energy Products posted a slight decline in earnings while Agway Insurance Company reported a loss due primarily to unusually severe liability claims and widespread property damage from the Blizzard of 1996.

"I am very excited about the future of this cooperative," Cardarelli said. "Our near-term challenge is to make more progress in the same areas we have been focused on by doing the basics very well. Our goal is to grow every business that Agway is in by being excellent at what we do today. Our success at this is directly linked to profitability on the farm."

Agway members also elected six producers to three-year terms on the 17-member Agway board of directors. They include: Kevin B. Barrett, Towanda, Pa.; Peter D. Hanks, Salem, N.Y.; Robert L.

Young Farmer Discussion Nov. 19

WARSAW, N.Y. — The New York Farm Bureau has planned a regional young farmer discussion meet competition for Tuesday, Nov. 19, at 7 p.m. at the Cooperative Extension Center in Warsaw.

The event is open to young farmers ages 18-35. Farm Bureau is encouraging young farmers who are interested in the future of agriculture, want to take a leadership role in making the industry better, and like to banter about issues until a solution is reached, to come and give the discussion meet competition a try.

The winner of the event will receive $100 toward expenses at the state convention in early December. There wil be no elimination of participants at the regional level. All participants are welcome to compete at the state level young farmer competition at the NYFB State Convention in Rochester, Dec. 2-5. The winner of the state competition receives $500 and an expense-paid trip to the national convention in Nashville, Jan. 5-9.

This year, the Young Farmer Discussion Meet topics are as follows:

1) Is our nation's trade policy in the best interest of American agriculture?

2) Are producer funded promotional efforts effective?

3) Are the environmental laws and regulations involved in agriculture unreasonable?

4) What are the benefits and concerns of today's modern informational systems?

Farm Bureau's discussion meet is like a debate in that issues are actively discussed, but different in the sense that the partitipants discuss the topic at hand and arrive at a solution as a group. The activity gives participants an opportunity to sharpen their leadership skills, learn more about agriculture and Farm Bureau, meet new people, and have fun.

For more information about the young farmer discussion meet call Jason Bowman, NYFB State Young Farmers Committee member, at (716) 584-3977.

More Work Needed To Control Poultry Ascites

distinctive "mark" of the presence of ascites is the presence of the yellow fluid, amounting to 0-500 cubic centimeters, in a bird's abdomen.

Simply put, the bird develops hypertension and fluid backs away from the liver, causing it to build up in the abdomen.

Genetically predisposed birds can inherit the illness, which used to be confined to birds grown at altitudes greater than 2,000 meters. Mostly it would affect males during the wintertime with an onset at 4-6 weeks.

But today, researchers have found that it can affect any kinds of birds at all altitudes at any time of the year though the stresses of cold weather, overcrowding, and poor ventilation.

Owen indicated that veterinarians discover the presence of ascites in flocks either from 7-14 days or from 4-6 weeks.

Researchers still aren't sure what triggers the disease, though it could be something that will attack at the incubational period in hatcheries, which we "need to pay more attention to," said Owen.

A practical, economical tool is needed to better diagnose the birds and come up with a selection process to weed out the birds prone to developing ascites.

Right now, several procedures can be used as early diagnosis. Many of them are either very, very laborious or cost- prohibitive. One method involves reading the electrocardiograms of birds — essentially hooking them up to a heart monitor.

Another is reading the levels of "troponin," a chemical measurement of muscle damage that can cost about $35 an assay.

The solution is one of prevention.

"In my humble opinion," said Owen, "the fix for this problem is going to be genetic."

Because of the genetic selection under way in the industry for a faster growing bird with big feed efficiency, the rest of the bird's support system has lagged behind. The selection criteria would be for birds with an excellent cardiopulmonary system.

For now producers can turn to various methods to improve the bird's chances of resisting the onslaught of ascites. One of those involves pulmonary vasodilators or diuretics.

The poultry industry has to come up with better ways to diagnose ascites disease and "put this into our selection process," said Dr. Robert L. Owen, V.M.D. and director of research/development operations and veterinary services for Hubbard Farms, center. At left is Dr. Barrett Cowen, associate professor of veterinary science at Penn State. At right is Dr. Dave Kradel, food safety coordinator for the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation.

While there is no "magic bullet," one effective means of handling the disease is through better overall poultry house management. That includes keeping the birds' thermal zone in the range of 65-70 degrees Fahrenheit, ventilate the house completely, and avoid overcrowding the birds.

In the end, however, "we all need to pay attention to the 'microclimates' in the house," he said.

Producers should realize that "we are approaching the physiological limit of growth rate and feed conversion in birds," said Owen. Birds in the future will have better balanced systems to handle the faster growout with increased weight. Until then, the solutions for ascites remain as merely "band-aids" as long as selection continues unabated for growth rate and feed efficiency.

For a solution, "somebody is going to have to pursue the answer, because we really need the answer," he said.

Jersey Research Proposals Sought

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Research proposals are now being solicited for projects addressing significant issues for the Jersey breed and Jersey milk producers.

Priorities for research funding include nutrition of high-producing Jerseys (particularly practical feeding methods to maximize production of valuable milk components); factors affecting yield of products manufactured from Jersey milk; factors affecting net income, longevity, and lifetime profit; breeding plans to optimize genetic gain while maintaining genetic diversity; biological and economic efficiencies of Jerseys; and factors affecting management of Jersey calves.

Research proposals will be evaluated by the AJCA Research Advisory Committee after the Dec. 1, 1996 submission deadline.

The Committee is to forward its recommendations by Feb. 1, 1997 to the AJCA board of directors, which awards funds at its meeting in March.

The policy of the Foundation is to fund projects only from investment income, and to decline payment of overhead costs. Monies will be available for approved projects after April 1, 1997.

Evaluative criteria for submissions are (a) merit (e.g., potential to advance practical knowledge, creative approach to the problem), (b) competence (i.e., high probability of successful completion within the proposed time frame), and (c) relevance (e.g., problem derived from one of the areas of research priority).

Since its inception, the AJCC Research Foundation's competitive grants program has provided partial or full funding for approximately eight worthy projects each year. Awards averaged $4,700 per project in 1993 through 1996. More than $300,000 in grants have been awarded since 1988.

DISAPPOINTMENTS ASSOCIATED WITH JUNIOR LIVESTOCK PROGRAMS

Keep high aspirations, moderate expectations, and small needs.

— H. Stein

With the current fair season rapidly approaching closure for another year, and the need to begin thinking about the 1997 Pennsylvania Farm Show, I thought it would be appropriate to visit the idea of disappointments associated with junior livestock programs, especially junior livestock shows.

In several of the previous articles, we have visited the idea of values, and the value of our junior livestock programs. The concept of values becomes extremely important, particularly if we are to prioritize various shortcomings inherent to these programs.

The shortcomings associated with our junior livestock programs often result in either confrontation or disappointment. Although some shortcomings in our programs result in confrontation among adults, our youth can encounter some disappointments.

Consider the following scenarios associated with junior livestock shows:

1. Two youngsters are showing market hogs at the county fair. Jimmy shows a hog that places first in its class, and Jane shows a hog that places third in the same class.

2. Two youngsters are showing lambs at the state fair. Due to logistical constraints, only a certain percentage of the lambs that show are eligible to sell. Marie has the opportunity to sell her lamb in the junior sale, and Monte doesn't get to sell his lamb in the sale.

3. Dave gets to show his steer, whereas Diane doesn't get to show her steer for any number of different reasons (for example, it's overweight, underweight, health papers, etc.).

4. Tina is feeding three pigs, all of which are tagged, and is eligible to show two at the fair. Conversely, Tommy is feeding two pigs, only one of which is tagged and is eligible to show at the fair. In both cases, one of the tagged pigs dies shortly after the feeder pig purchase deadline.

5. A youngster showing a steer at the fair is "run over" by another exhibitor's steer and must be taken to a nearby hospital for emergency treatment.

Which of the following scenarios would bring the greatest disappointment to youngsters involved with the program, and which should bring the least disappointment?

Is the rank-order for these scenarios by a youngster the same rank-order for most parents and adults?

• Scenario #1 — Jimmy shows a hog that places first in its class, and Jane shows a hog that places third in the same class. Is there anything disppointing about this scenario?

Some people would argue that Jane might be disappointed with her third-place finish. Some people would contend that Jimmy could be disappointed with his first-place finish, and still other people would argue that there is absolutely nothing disappointing about this scenario!

Without any further details, it is difficult to imagine how Jimmy could be disappointed with winning his class. Maybe Jimmy expected to exhibit the champion of the show, or maybe he won his class in an unethical manner, and realizes it was wrong. As written, scenario #1 reflects upon competition and WINNING. Our competitive spirit has served us well in the past, and should continue to push us toward excellence in everything we attempt. Winning is simply one possible outcome of competing.

• Scenario #2 — The potential disappointments for Marie and Monte focus on MONEY. For a variety of reasons, we have rules governing shows and sales that almost guarantee Marie will receive some price above normal market price for her lamb, and Monte will receive market price. Bottom line: Some people have money, and some people don't, but we should make every attempt to ensure equity among participants for selling their project animals.

• Scenario #3 — This is unfortunate, but not disappointing. This scenario involves RULES. Everyone usually knows the rules before they play the game. Not everyone has a clear appreciation or understanding of how to play the game as well as some others within the guidelines set forth by the rules. Most rules are instituted in order to reasonably ensure: (a) the health and safety of people involved in the program, (b) the health and safety of animals involved in the program, and (c) that everyone involved has equal opportunity to achieve every possible outcome. Letter (c) is more simply stated, "to ensure a level playing field." When we write rules for junior livestock programs and junior livestock shows, do we thoroughly examine all of the potential ramifications of the rules? Do we write and institute rules in a timely fashion so that every potential participant has the opportunity to ask qeustions regarding the rules? Do we take the time to explain the purpose of and justification for the rules we have instituted?

• Scenario #4 — Scenario #4 is disappointing because it addresses the harsh and inevitable realities of DEATH. Death of a pet, or animal that is under the care of a young person, is one of the most traumatic events that can occur for a youngster. Not only has Tommy's pig died, but according to the rules of tagging pigs for the show, Tommy cannot participate because he doesn't have a pig tagged for exhibition. This is another instance where we may not have completely examined all of the possible ramifications of the rules.

• Scenario #5 — This scenario is the most disappointing to me, for several reasons. It implies a poten-

Crop Advisers

Of course, those consultants who have not taken the tests and met the requirements are not certified and may not use the official certification logo in their business.

Successful farmers will increasingly need to depend on professional advisors to help with their farming operations. The certified public accountant and the lawyer for estate planning have already become standard on-call professionals for most farm operationa. And with the increasing regulatory environment that is moving in on the family farm's life, the Certified Crop Adviser is poised to also become a necessary professional the farmer calls for operational advice.

Anyone who would like more information about the state or national crop adviser certification program may call Caye Brubaker, the administrative assistant to the Pennsylvania CCA board, at (717) 392-7577.

Md. Teens Take Honors

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Ten Maryland teens participated in the 46th annual National 4-H Engineering, Science, and Leadership Event at West Lafayette, Ind., recently. The teens were among 73 contestants from 17 states. They represented thousands of 4-H'ers who competed in county and state contests throughout the year.

The top three in each of the eight categories of the national event received a plaque, and the first-place winners also received an expense-paid trip to next year's event.

Brian Roberts, 15, Pleasantville, a Frederick County 4-H member, won the bicycle championship by a wide margin. Roberts went into the competition as the only person ever to win the Maryland state 4-H bicycle championship in all three age groups. He is the third member of his family to win both state and national championship honors. His sister Erin, now 20, won the national championship in 1991, and his brother Shawn, now 17, won in 1994. Shawn competed nationally this year in the 4-H computer category and placed third.

Steve O'Hara, 15, another 4-H member from Frederick County (Mount Pleasant), took second-place honors in the national 4-H small engines competition. O'Hara's win also was a family tradition; his brothers, Richard and David, were state 4-H small engines champions in 1992 and 1995, respectively.

Other top contestants from Maryland included Chris Gazunis, 17, of Slidell (Montgomery County), who placed third in the electric category; Jeffrey Fritz, 18, of New Windsor (Carroll County), who placed third in the tractor category; and David Daughton, 17, of Pylesville (Harford County), who placed fifth in the lawn tractor competition. In the aerospace event, two-person Maryland teams placed second and fourth, and in the automotive event a Maryland two-person team placed fourth.

Continuing a 45-year tradition of leadership by University of Maryland, College Park agricultural engineering faculty, Lee Grant and David Ross, Biological Resources Engineering, each supervised a contest at this year's 4-H National Event. Grant was in charge of the lawn tractor contest and has played an active role in the event's transition from regional to national scope, and Ross headed the 4-H bicycle competition.

The late Guy Gienger was instrumental in organizing the first event at Richmond, Va. in 1951, when it was known as the Eastern U.S. 4-H tractor operators contest. Since 1970 the winner's torphy has been named in his memory. Larry Stewart, former department chairperson, was responsible for establishing the bicycle competition as part of the national 4-H engineering event.

Roberts siblings, from left, Shawn, 17; Erin, 20; and Brian, 15, of Pleasantville (Washington County), gathered to celebrate Brian's landslide victory in the bicycle contest during the 46th annual National 4-H Engineering, Science and Leadership Event at West Lafayette, Ind. Both Erin and Shawn have won the event in the past, and Shawn took third place in this year in the national 4-H computer contest.

Adams Holsetin Club Meets

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The presentation of awards, reports from committees and several resource speakers filled the agenda at the 45th annual meeting of the Adams County Holstein Association held Oct. 29, in the fire hall at East Berlin.

Kevin Holtzinger presided and introduced guests and speakers.

Inspirational speaker Neil McCullough, secretary to the board of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association and a dairy farmer from Newville, shared his concern for the future of the family farm.

He cited many changes which have impacted the farming community and observed how these appear to be influencing the desire to work and to participate in commodity organizations.

Kenneth Rainey, interim executive director for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, spoke to the group about administrative changes in the state organization. He encouraged the members to pay annual dues now to obtain a discount, explained a reduced fee schedule for catch-up on animal registrations, and said that export sales of breeding stock remain the primary fund-raiser for the state association. Sales to Japan, Korea, and Egypt are in progress, a sale to Saudi Arabia is expected.

Rainey announced the annual Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale to be held Saturday, Nov. 16, at the Ag Arena, University Park, will feature 79 Holsteins and 17 Jersey dairy cattle.

He invited all members to attend the State Holstein Convention, Feb. 20-22, 1997, at the Sheraton Inn, Reading, members of the Junior Holstein Association to attend their annual meeting, Feb. 7-9, at the same location.

Dairy Princess Joy Hess encouraged everyone present to drink milk and to join her in spreading the word about the nutritional benefits of dairy products in the diet. She also announced that Pennsylvania Junior Holstein members are now selling chances on a well-pedigreed Holstein calf to be raffled as a fund-raiser at the Junior Convention.

Reporting on highlights of the past year's dairy program, County Agent Emeritus Thomas E. Piper reviewed participation in the Dairy MAP program, the Dairy Nutrition Teleconference and a successful year for the 4-H dairy program. With slide illustrations, he reviewed a very educational tour which a busload of dairy farmers made to Lebanon County on April 9, 1996. The Holstein Club's annual twi-light meeting held July 11th at the John Hess farm and the Farm-City Family Fun Festival hosted by the Thomas Clowney family on Sept. 21, 1996, were other significant activities mentioned in his report.

Christine Wood reported on activities of the Junior Members and presented production awards to the following: Clay Wood, Shannon Holtzinger, and Ashleigh Van Lieu for 2-year-old cows; Shannon Holtzinger for a 3-year-old; Shannon Holtzinger (twice) and Ashleigh Van Lieu for 4-year-olds; and Matthew Guise, winner of the award for 5-year-olds with the cow that won the award as a 4-year-old. Ashleigh Van Lieu was announced as winner of the Junior Progressive Breeder Award.

Reporting for the Scholarship Committee, Christine Wood announced the 1996 winner to be Julie Zepp, the 1995 Adams County dairy princess who is currently attending Millersville University.

President Holtzinger invited retired Holstein breeder Adam Lobaugh to recap the years of service devoted to support for the club by the recently retired county agent, Thomas E. Piper. A plaque expressing appreciation was presented.

During the business meeting, the following individuals were elected to a three-year term on the board of directors: John Clowney, Todd Gulick, and Kevin Holtzinger. Dean Lobaugh presented a treasurer's report, Dan Waybright reported for the auditors, and John Clowney, Marvin Brown and Christine Wood reported on successful fund-raisers. As state director, Marvin Brown announced the next state board meeting is set for Dec. 19.

Guernsey Deadlines Fast Approaching

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Two deadlines are quickly approaching for Guernsey dairy cattle breeders.

The cuttoff date for entering the 1999 National Guernsey Gold Futurity is Nov. 30; while the entry deadline for consideration in the 1996 All-American contest (including the junior-division) is Nov. 18.

The Guernsey Futurity is a contest whereby a registered Guernsey calf is entered as a calf and then, three years later, is judged as a 3-year-old cow during the national Guernsey show at the North American International Livestock Exposition, in Louisville, Kentucky (held in November each year).

More specifically, to enter the 1999 Futurity, the calf must have been born between Sept. 1, 1995 and August 31, 1996.

Prize money comes from payments made throughout the three years, starting with the initial payment of $3. Anyone may enter a Guernsey heifer by submitting a completed entry form along with the fee.

The fee structure is $3 the first year; $5 the second year; $10 the third; and $25 prior to the show.

Awards are presented to the owners of the first and second place animals; the first-place animal exhibited by a youth (junior exhibitor); the first place bred and owned winner; the highest 305-day actual DHIR or DHI milk production record (among the top 20 animals placed in the class); the highest butterfat producer out of those animals; the highest protein producer; the highest Cow Performance Index (CPI) cow; and to the highest-placing cow sired by a bull that was proven through one of the four AGA-sponsored young sire groups; and the best udder.

The postmark on the envelope containing the entry form is to be used to determine eligibility in meeting the Nov. 30 deadline.

As far as submitting entries for the 42nd All-American Contest, while most exhibitors at national Guernsey shows are generally aware of the program, as a reminder, the $20 entry fee must be paid by Nov. 18.

A late entry extension, until Nov. 22, is allowed, but the fee doubles to $40. Again, the envelope postmark is the deciding factor in determining entries made in time.

A committee of four judges of the national Guernsey shows selects the six top entries in each show class to be All-American nominees.

A final selection committee is comprised of judges from state, regional and national shows. They are mailed the photographs of the animals (must be done by a professional livestock photographer or be disqualified) that are submitted by the cattle owners as part of the entry, along with the listing of all show placings.

The judges each vote individually by mail on the placing of the six nominees for each show class. Only the top three are assigned a ranking.

For more information on Guernsey programs, contact the AGA at P.O. Box 666, Reynoldsburg, Ohio, or call (614) 864-2409.

tial breach of SAFETY. Could the accident have been avoided? Possibly, but even the most docile steers at home may not act the same way at the fair. More importantly, the youngster who was hurt by a steer was not hurt by his own steer, but someone else's steer.

Without a doubt, safety should be the highest priority for everyone involved with junior livestock programs, and we should implement every precaution possible to ensure the safety of everyone involved.

Safety is my primary concern. Therefore, potential breaches of safety that result in injury are most disappointing to me. Just because we have a junior livestock show and no one gets hurt doesn't mean that we have instituted the necessary safety precautions and rules to ensure that someone doesn't get hurt in the future. This scenario could have easily focused on a pig show. Why do we have adults with hurdles in the showring during a hog show, but often we fail to provide the necessary adult assistance in the showring during a steer or heifer show?

Potential rank order of the scenarios in terms of most to least disappointing:

Rank 1. SAFETY — of people involved with the program.

2. DEATH — of an animal under the care of a young person.

3. RULES — ensuring safe and healthy competition.

4. MONEY — some have it and some don't . . . this will not change.

5. WINNING — is not nearly as important as competing, and competing is not nearly as important as participating.

Why is it that the most definitive outward displays of disappointment at junior livestock shows involve winning or not winning? Fact: You have a better chance of making money with a project animal than you have of winning a show. Fact: You have a greater chance of NOT winning a particular show than you have of winning!

Lastly, in terms of winning and not winning, and the disappointments associated with competition in junior livestock shows, I'll paraphrase the quote by H. Stein at the beginning of the article: "We should have high aspirations of winning . . . moderate expectations of winning . . . and, small need to win."

N.Y. Farm Bureau Sets Convention

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Tony Snow, stand-in host for the "Rush Limbaugh Show" and a nationally syndicated columnist with The Detroit News and USA Today, is slated to address the annual convention of the New York Farm Bureau at the Dec. 4 banquet.

A former speechwriter to President Bush, Snow currently hosts a Sunday morning show on Fox TV and is a substitute host for CNN's "Crossfire."

The convention is set for Dec. 2-5, at the Holiday Inn-Genesee Plaza in Rochester.

In addition to Tony Snow, confirmed convention speakers include nationally-known motivational speaker David Okerlund, Ag & Markets Commissioner Donald Davidsen, N.Y. Farm Bureau President John Lincoln, and Farm Family CEO Phil Weber.

Invited convention speakers include Gov. George Pataki, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, and Rep. Bill Paxon.

The flagship event of the convention is the adoption of Farm Bureau policy. The convention will also feature a drawing for a Dodge truck (eligible members include those individuals who have paid their dues by Nov. 10), the election of officers, the presentation of the Distinguished Service to Agriculture in the Empire State Award and the Young Farmer Achievement Award, presentation of membership and program area awards, tours of Rochester area farms, and a reception featuring a wide variety of foods from Western New York.

Furthermore, there will be free cholesterol and blood pressure checks, as well as an array of interesting exhibits to explore.

Anyone interested in attending all or part of the convention should call Pam Rafferty at (518) 431-5606.

Jezabael, sired by Bis-May Cleitus, was the top producing senior 2-year-old, with 305-day production of 31,984 pounds milk, 1,233 pounds of fat, and 1,013 pounds of protein.

Among the senior 3-year-olds, the Hershey's C Shadowwave TT Aylla-Et, a Carnation Counselor daughter, made 38,439 pounds of milk, 1,252 pounds of fat, and 1,121 pounds of protein.

The top milk-producing junior 3-year-old was Mar-R Leadman Jill, a Rothrock Tradition Leadman daughter, owned by Marvin Stoltzfus, that made 32,706 pounds of milk.

The top component producing junior 3-year-old was cow No.73, in the Sa-Mar Farm herd, with 1,206 pounds of fat and 981 pounds of protein.

The top milk-producing 4-year-old was No.15, owned by Kenneth Zurin, with 33,171 pounds of milk, while the top component producing animal in that age class was Donegal Creek Caveman Ella-Red, owned by Joseph Wivell, with 1,332 pounds of fat and 960 pounds of protein.

In the youth awards, Heather Brubaker, of Manheim (who was also present along with Lara Welk as county dairy ambassadors), had the highest milk-producing 3-year-old. Her Heritage Sexy Elsie had a 305-day production record of 20,065 pounds milk, 644 pounds fat, and 651 pounds protein.

The highest total component-producing 3-year-old among the youth was Welk-Acres Marvel Marlene, owned by Jeremy Welk, of Quarryville. Marlene made a combined fat and protein total of 1,708 pounds. Calf Winner

The prize calf donated by Matt Welk, of Wakefield, was won by Brian Mull, son of Scott and Sheila Mull, of East Drumore.

The Mulls have 140 registered cows, and he has three heifers of his own, though none carry quite the pedigree as does the September calf donated by Welk. Both her dam and grandam are both Excellents with Excellent mammaries.

Also in contention for the calf was Denise Bollinger, of Manheim.

Elections

In club elections, Mike Eby of Lancaster, Dave Wenger of Manheim, and Matt Wanner of Narvon were selected to serve on the board of directors.

A reorganizational meeting, normally held immediately following the annual banquet was postponed until later.

Sen. Madigan Sponsors Penn State Food Display

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania Sen. Roger Madigan (R-23rd District), chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has sponsored the exhibition of a mobile displaying products from Pennsylvania's large and diverse food processing and manufacturing industries Nov. 16-20 in the mini-Rotunda of the State Capitol Building.

The display, conceived and designed by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, contains products from such Pennsylvania food companies as Hershey Foods, Utz Quality Foods, Turkey Hill Dairy, Furman Foods, and John Cope's Food Products.

"The display of Pennsylvania-produced food products is so visually captivating that I thought it was a perfect method for highlighting how important food processing and manufacturing is to the economy of the commonwealth," Sen. Madigan said. "The unique and engaging display is an eye-catching method to show legislators and visitors how large and diverse Pennsylvania's food industry is."

The display is designed as a series of hanging mobiles, each measuring about 15 feet long. The exhibit will hang from the ceiling, ending at a height about six feet off the ground. The exhibition also includes an educational display describing the state's food system and Penn State's role in supporting it.

"Using this display in Harrisburg is an opportunity for Penn State to heighten the awareness of the food processing and manufacturing industry, which is the component of the food system least appreciated and understood by the public," said Donald Thompson, associate professor of food science and head of the college's food science department. "The display shows how agriculture can be involved in responding to the consumer marketplace as well as in producing raw materials."

Pennsylvania ranks fifth in food processing nationwide, according to statistics from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and has the largest food-processing industry in the Northeast. The state has the most bakeries in the nation and ranks first in the production of mushrooms, pretzels, potato chips, chocolate and other confectionery products.

According to Pennsylvania Department of Commerce statistics, the state has more than 2,300 food companies, ranging in size from H.J. Heinz Co., which has $6.6 billion in annual sales, to regional meat processors such as Kessler's Inc. in Lemoyne. Food processors employ about 90,000 workers, accounting for almost 9 percent of all manufacturing jobs.

Thompson said the food display also will be part of Penn State's exhibit at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, Jan. 11-16. After that, the exhibit will be installed in Borland Laboratory on Penn State's University Park Campus.

Lawrences 'Moo've' On History At Mt. Ararat Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PORT DEPOSIT, Md. — More than distance is involved in moving a cow herd from Connecticut to Maryland. But the move is one that Tom and Jennifer Lawrence have not regretted.

In the two years since their move, the Lawrences have made remarkable strides in the cow industry and have become well known in Holstein, Jersey, and Guernsey circles.

They've also been named the first runner-up young cooperative couple by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Cooperative.

The Lawrences manage Mount Ararat Farm. The 700-acre farm sets high on the cliffs above the Cheseapeake Bay and the Susquehanna River.

The land was part of a land grant to Lord George Talbot in 1630 by the King of England. It is said that Talbot went into hiding in a large cave at the base of Mt. Ararat after murdering a tax collector of the king. Eventually Talbot's cousin Lord Baltimore obtained a pardon from the King of England.

Donaldson Brown purchased the farm from Sen. Joseph France who had been operating a dairy and delivery service. He had married Jacob Tome's widow, and after her death, married a Russian princess. The marriage soon ended in a well-publicized divorce.

Frank D. Brown Jr. owned the farm from 1948 until his death in 1992, when it was acquired by its present owner, his daughter Gabrielle Buck.

While the farm has a long and colorful history, the Lawrences have a bit of interesting personal history of their own albeit short.

Jennifer did not grow up on a farm. However, when she was 16 years old, she started working on a neighboring farm. Soon, she wanted to do more than milk cows. She learned to breed cows and became a Eastern A.I. technician.

Tom grew up on a Jersey dairy farm that his dad and uncle farmed in partnership. After two years studying dairy farm management and technology at the Vermont Technical College, he returned to the family farm. During this time, Jennifer came to the farm periodically to do AI work. Although the two enjoyed talking together, no romantic sparks flew in the beginning of the acquaintance. But when Tom's year-long engagement ended, his thoughts turned toward Jennifer. After a year-long courtship, the couple decided to marry in 1987.

Unfortunately Tom's uncle wanted to sell the farm. Tom and his dad could not afford to buy out the uncle's share. Much to Tom's chagrin, the farm was sold for developement and Tom's dreams to continue farming the family farm was dashed.

Tom started working on another farm.-Jennifer continued breeding cows.

Two years later, the couple started farming on their own on a rented farm. It was a day of small beginnings. The Lawrences started out by milking only 15 cows, which included five Jerseys, a Guernsey heifer, and a few Holsteins. They used bucket milkers because they didn't want to invest a lot of money into a rented farm.

Tom continued to work full time for another farmer while farming on the side on his own until the cow herd was built up to 50 head, which they increased to 56 head in two shifts.

"Connecticut is a difficult state to farm in. We were impressed with the many services available for farmers in Lancaster County and started looking around," Tom said.

When the Lawrences heard that a dairy manager was needed for Mt. Ararat Farm, the couple interviewed for the position and six weeks later moved not only their household goods and children, Carolyn, now 6, and Virginia, 3, but also 45 mature cows and 65 young stock. (A son Thomas was born two months later).

Two trucks with cattle on three levels were used for the move.

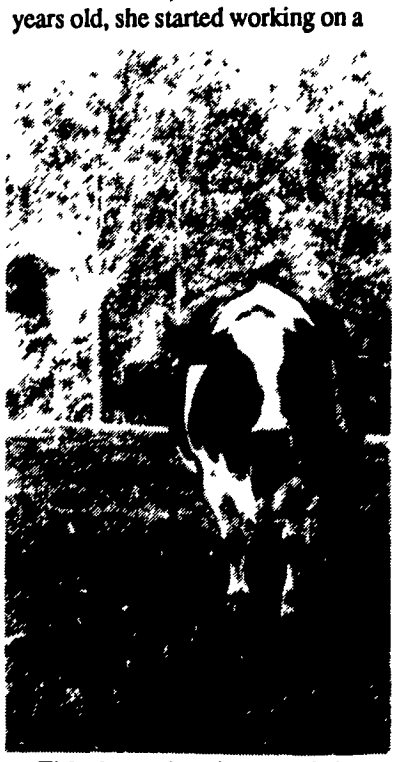
"We had no problems moving the herd, but the first milking was hell," Tom said.

The couple had to convince the herd, which was accustomed to tie stalls, to walk through the milking parlor. After the first night, things became progressively better until, after a few weeks, the cows no longer needed to be shoved through. By that time, only two cows had not adapted to the change and they were culled.

"The cows adapted better than we expected," Tom said.

Energetic, personable, and devoted to farming, Thomas and Jennifer Lawrence, who are Maryland And Virginia Cooperative's Young Cooperative Runnerup Couple, manage Mt. Ararat Farm in Port Deposit, Maryland. They maintain four herds, their own Tol-Je-So Jersey and Holstein herds and Mt. Ararat's Guernsey and Holstein herds.

"Cow comfort and producing a quality product are the name of the game," Tom said. For that reason, new facilities were built to house the calves instead of using the former stone barns, which are beautiful to look at but inconvenient and too damp for cow comfort.



This homebred cow of the Lawrences recently went Excellent with a score of 92.

Part of the reason, he believes is because "good facilities are here," he said.

The unusual aspect about Mt. Ararat Farms is that four different herds are maintained.

The 51-head Guernsey herd is part of the farm's world-renowned herd. The farm also has 40 head of Holsteins.

The Lawrences' personal herd includes 17 Jerseys and 48 Holsteins under the prefix Tol-Je-So.

Although the four herds mingle together in the fields and barns, the herds are separated for DHIA records. Ear tags are used to distinguish the cows that belong to the Lawrences and those that belong to the Bucks.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

'Moo've' On

While the milking parlor has its advantages, the Lawrences remain loyal to tie stalls. Although the freestalls are more labor efficient, the Lawrences believe tie stalls allows more individual attention to cows. It was also easier to have their children around the cows in the tie stall barn than the freestall.

A typical day begins at 3 a.m. and ends at 7 p.m. for Tom. It takes about three hours to milk the 170 cows. Although two full-time and one seasonal worker works on the farm, Tom finds it difficult to take time off.

"I can't sit at home if someone else is doing the work," he said.

Although herd averages have risen significantly under the Lawrences management, the couple shun compliments on their abilities. They know how quickly things can go wrong even with the best laid plans and oversight.

Recently one of the best Guernseys slipped in the parlor and needed to be put down.

"We don't want to pat ourselves on the back," Tom said. "We give the nutritionist lots of credit."

Because the couple were independent farmers, they weren't sure if they could work for someone else. "But this has worked out well. We talk things over with the owners Walter and Gabrielle Buck, but they allow us to make a lot of decisions," Tom said.

"Honesty is the best policy when working for someone else," Jennifer advised. "Tell everything."

The couple were hired as a package deal.

Jennifer does the A.I. work, cares for the calves, and is the cow record bookkeeper for the farm. While Jennifer does the breeding, it's Tom who enjoys researching genetics. He puts together a mating list that the owners review and make selections or changes. They also use Triple A Mating in which the cows and bulls are analyzed and assigned numbers.

When the Lawrences came they admittedly knew little about Guernseys, but they did know a lot about cows and what they didn't know about Guernseys, they soon learned.

They learned that calf heifers do better at bunk feeders than at computer feeders. That it's good to run Guernseys through a foot bath to prevent foot problems.

"Guernseys handle heat stress well but not other stresses," Tom said.

Jennifer said, "We try to pay attention to the smallest detail. When you're busy, you can go crazy, but it's a must for things to go smoothly," Jennifer said.

One of the places that the Lawrences pay close attention to milking procedures. They clip udders. Their goal is to keep somatic cell counts below 150, which was much easier to do when they had tiestalls.

For their Jersey herd, the Lawrences were recently awarded for having the lowest somatic cell count in the county.

When the couple first came to Mt. Ararat, the calves were kept in one of the beautiful old stone barns on the property. Unfortunately, the calves would lay against the stone walls, which often caused the calves to develop pneumonia.

The Lawrences are staunch believers in raising cattle outdoors as much as possible. For this reason, a super hutch with four bays was erected. Vaccinations and dehorning can be done with ease.

"It's a great place to wean calves," Jennifer said of the hutches. The calves are put into hutches at birth for two to three months and then to the super hutches for up to six months.

In the milking barn, curtains are on all four sides to allow maximum air flow. While the calves are bedded with straw, the cows are bedded with sand.

About 15 yards of fresh sand is delivered every three weeks.

"The cows like the sand better than the mattresses," Tom said.

Under their management, the farm has been made a lot more efficient. A new manure storage system has been completed recently.

"Now we can spread it under optimum conditions instead of spending two hours on it everyday like we used to do," said Tom, who estimates that 25 percent is saved in manure costs.

Numerous lots are scattered around the grounds for dry cows. A mixer wagon is used to feed the cattle at the lots.

One of the barns on the property is used to prepare the show cows and to house any that seem ill. While the Lawrences regret that many of the beautiful stone barns, which are structually sound, and silos on the property are empty, they know that by using the old facilities, cow comfort and health are jeopardized.

"Cow comfort and producing a quality product are the name of the game," Tom said.

He enjoys working with both cows and crops. "You must do a good job at everything to produce a good herd," he said.

"Recently we've had two homebred cows go Excellent. It's a real big thrill," Jennifer said as she recalled how they started with inexpensive cows and continued to upgrade breeding because they couldn't afford to buy the best in the beginning.

"It's nice to have any cow go Excellent, but it's extra special when you homebred it yourself," Jennifer said.

The first homebred Excellent cow scored 92 points at 3 years and 2 months. It milks 27,390 pounds, 4.76 fat, 1,305 pounds fat, and 3.61 protein.

In the future, the couple hope to sell bulls to both Holstein and Guernsey associations.

The couple see their move as a great opportunity.

"The breed associations are much stronger here — some of the best in the country," Tom said.

They are delighted with the good rapport established through the Maryland Virginia Milk Cooperative. After they were named young cooperative runner-ups, they attended the NICE conference in St. Louis. They also received a herd management award from the Jersey breed.

Awards are nothing new to the Lawrences. They were named the outstanding young farmers two years in a row for the county and one year for the state of Connecticut.

The Lawrences live on the house on the property that was built by the former owner who called it a "piece of paradise." The house sits on a wooded cliff overlooking both the river and the bay.

"The deer come up to the house windows," Jennifer said of the wildlife.

While Jennifer spends many hours working on the farm, she drops the children off at a babysitter's home that is on the grounds.

"I always wanted my children with me, but they like it with the babysitter and that way I don't need to worry that they might get hurt by the machinery or animals," Jennifer said.

Jennifer, Carolyn, 6; Virginia, 3; and Thomas, 20 months, stand in their yard, which sets high on the cliffs above the Cheseapeake Bay and the Susquehana River shown in the background.

Jennifer is delighted at the opportunities to host open houses on the farm. In June, they hosted the National Guernsey Association Tour and two weeks ago about 1,000 people came to the county farm tour organized by the Cooperative Extension.

Signs on all the equipment enabled visitors to see what each piece cost. Visitors saw the precautions taken in preparing cows for milking.

Jennifer said, "Although we don't get any monetary gain from it, the open houses are a great opportunity to show the public how farmers are really quality minded.

The biggest drawback for moving from his home state is that "I don't get to work with my father," Tome said. "We worked really well together and I didn't realize how much I would miss him until I came here. I envy other guys who can work with their fathers."

While he doesn't have a dad nearby, Tom often refers to a valuable asset that he does have.

He recalled that on his first day of class at college, the professor stressed that if student wanted to farm, he or she should make sure to get a spouse who understands and is willing to accept farming.

"I've been really lucky," he said. "My wife loves farming as much as I do."

While Mt. Ararat Farm has an unique history, the Lawrences don't bask in the past glory of the farm. They want to add to that history by building new records.

"Making more milk isn't always the answer," Tom said. "It's the bottom line that determines the best way to go."

"For us, cow comfort and producing a quality product are the name of the game," he said.

The couple are optimistic that the future for the dairy industry and for them will continue to build a lasting legacy for future generations.

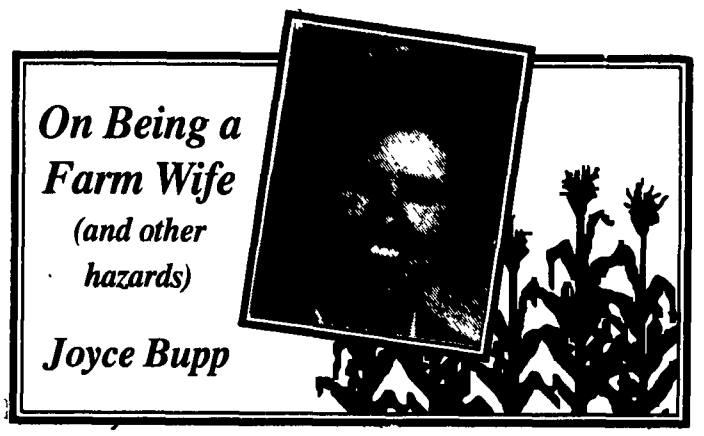
Your farm, your way. AGWAY®



This is a losing battle.

I get up. She gets up.

I put her down. She gets back up.

You can teach a dog to stay. To lie down. To speak, roll over, catch a frisbee, herd livestock.

You can teach a cat zip. (I'm sure there are exceptions to that rule, but not with most of the cats I've ever known.) They're independent, yet playful, strong-minded but with a need for affection. When it suits them. Cats train you. You don't train them.

Monk has ruled "her" household for about 10 years. She's a very clean and well-behaved cat. Stays off counters and tables. Goes outside or uses her litterbox. Is too sneaky to eat most anything but certain cat food, so does not bother any food left temporarily unattended. And is "fixed," so we've eliminated her original tendency to glut the place with kittens.

But, where I sit, Monk wants to sit. Where I am, Monk wants to be. Not all of the time, but usually when it is not necessarily convenient to have a cat on your lap. Like while you're eating breakfast. Or working at something required jumping up and down from the table to tend to something else you're trying to do at the same time.

Or at the desk. Monk has a fixation for my cushioned desk chair. Usually when I'm in it and working at the computer. It is doggone inconvenient to have a cat stomping around on your lap when you're trying to work on a keyboard just inches away.

So I put her down. And she hops back up.

I get up from the chair to do something in the kitchen, come back in a few moments and she's curled up on the seat. Purring.

I put her down. And she hops back up. On occation, I'll even lay the fuzzy black and white blanket on the bench next to the chair and gently lay her on it. She hops off and back into my lap.

Some days we engage in this battle for an entire morning. She finally wins when I leave to do something else and she gets to stay on the chair. Curled up on the soft, warm cushion. Purring. And will usually stay there for several hours. Simply basking in squatter's rights, probably.

Late evenings, when I finally plunk down into a living room chair, Monk is right there again. It doesn't matter where she was, even curled up sound asleep, she'll know the instant there's lap space unoccuped.

You have to admire cats for their single-minded attentiveness to creature comfort. Cats have an inbred instinct for finding the softest, warmest, cushiest spots available, wherever they live.

One of my favorite barn cats, a black one with a few white and yellow splotches around her face, hangs around until I fill the heifers through with fresh, soft hay. Then she promptly crawls into the soft, dry grass, curls up and closes her eyes. While the heifers nibble away all around her. And we generally have at least one barn cat, that on a cold night, can be found curled up next to — or on top of — one of the baby calves in the nursery.

The cows are almost as bad. They've taken to piling together in the edge of the pastures along the fencerow, where falling leaves have created soft, insulated beds in which to lay. But, at least cows don't come hunting laps to curl up in. Thank goodness.

After battling with Monk the entire time I've been writing this, we have declared a truce. I put the blanket out for her on the bench. She curled up at my feet.

I'm afraid to think what kind of strategy she might be plotting.

But I may go put on my hard-toed hiking boots.

Berks Farm Women Hold Convention

READING (Berks Co.) — The 45th annual Berks County Farm Women Convention was held on Saturday, October 5, at the Berks County Ag Center with 108 members and guests in attendance. The convention was called to order by County President Wendy Lingle with the singing of God Bless America, devotions from Psalms #104 and the Pledge to the Flag.

Berks County Farm Women participated in the State Farm Women project by contributing $250 to the county 4-H. John Valter accepted this donation on behalf of the 4-H. Valter said that Berks County's 4-H was started in 1912 as the "corn club" and has been active in rural areas for more than 80 years. Youth today still have the desire to possess skills in farming, sewing, and cooking. 4-H is still growing in Berks County.

State Dairy Princess Angela Werley performed a skit, "I'm a little Milk Drop," and told of her involvement in legislation that would honor farmers with "Farmers Appreciation Day." Little Dairy Princess Kelly Rohrbach also performed a song with her cow puppet.

The following livestock organizations representatives set up displays at the convention: Jason Manbeck, State Pork Ambassador; Emilie Miller, State Polled Hereford Princess, and Nicole Knepp, Sheep & Wool Queen of Berks County.

Fern Phillippy, state historian, has printed a book on the history of Berks County Farm Women and it sells for $2. President Lingle honored Marion Leberman, Group #1, and Sally Manbeck, Group #2 by presenting them with 80 plus pins. Evelyn Becker, Group #4, and Jean Waldo (deceased) Group #4 were honored prior to the convention. Members remembered eight of deceased members during a memorial service: Grace Dietz, Group #7; Ada Wolfe, Group #2; Nora Sweitzer, Group #6; Betty Boyer, Group #2; Mildred Emerich, Group #2; Mary Youse, Group #6; Pauline Heffelfinger, Group #1 and Jean Waldo, Group #4.

After lunch, members were entertained by "Country Keys" singers Linette Mertz and Terry Hertzog.

Winners in the state youth project "something made by hand" were Kindergarten and first grade, Shawn Stoudt, first Alyssa Prutzman, second. Second and third grades: Ken Swank, first, Sheen Stoudt, second, Steven Gehris, third. Sixth-eighth grades: Josh Taylor, first, Katrina Prutzman, second and Justin Gaff, third. Ninth-12th grades: Daniel Folk, first. Each winner received a monetary gift and a certificate.

State president Dottie Stricker installed Ruth Walters Group #1 as the county president; Betsy Sattazahn Group #5 as vice president, and Pearl Hoffman Group #6 as secretary. County president, Wendy Lingle, was presented with a past president's pin and a bouquet of flowers in appreciation of her two years of service as president.

On behalf of Berks County 4-H, John Valter accepts a $250 check from Wendy Lingle, president of the Berks County Farm Women.

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Angela Werley performs a skit, "I'm a Little Milk Drop."

Farm-City Banquet Encourages Understanding Between Urban, Farm Communities

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — When Dave Kline, general manager of WEEU radio planned to spend a day on Ben Reed's poultry farm, he took along his hip boots. To Kline's surprise, the 90,000-bird broiler operation was clean and didn't even smell, so he left his hip boots lay on the lawn.

Reed took those hip boots with him when he spent a day at the radio station.

"It was election time, and I thought there'd be more manure around that radio station with all the campaign promises than on the farm," said Reed, who also started a compost business on his Strausstown farm.

During the Berks County Farm-City Banquet held last week at The Riveredge Restaurant, Kline and Reed showed slides highlighting the agriculture-business exchange. In addition, Chuck Domino, manager of the Reading Phillies, and Joe Plageman, general manager of Giorgio Foods, reported on their participation in the exchange.

Domino was fascinated with the mushroom growing operation that Plageman oversees at Giorgio Foods. Plageman was amazed at the many behind-the-scenes responsibilities that Domino supervises. All four participants were enthusiastic about the exchange program, which fosters understanding between urban and farming communities.

"Farming is financially and physically demanding. Everything needs to be high tech and sophisticated to produce quality and yields every day," Kline said of his impressions formed by the exchange.

Special awards recipients included Dr. Lenora Sammons, who received the first Tressie S. Caton Woman in Agriculture Award. The award is given to a woman who exemplifies a generosity in helping others, commitment to advancing agricultural awareness in everyday life, determination to start and finish a job, and promoting respect for those who make their livelihood in agriculture.

Sammons is owner of Willow Creek Animal Hospital, which treats both large and small animals in Berks and surrounding counties. Through her leadership, the hospital has sponsored numerous veterinary student internships, school class, and group visits and participated for 10 years in county Farm Bureau tours.

New Twists With Pasta

Does the word pasta conjure up the image of spaghetti and meatballs or macaroni and cheese?

These dishes do indeed fit the terminology of pasta fare, but don't limit yourself to old favorites.

Be adventurous. More and more unique pasta shapes and names seem to be appearing on grocery shelves. Many pasta products can be interchanged in recipes, but some sizes are definitely better with certain recipes.

Couscous (pronouced koose-koose) has been around for about 1,000 years, but has not become popular in this area until recent years. It is one of the most exciting and popular pasta products on the market. Couscous is tiny granules of pasta, made from 100 percent semolina wheat. Because it has already been cooked with steam and then dried, it is ready to eat in less than 10 minutes. Similar in texture and appearance to rice, it is ideal as a side dish or as an ingredient in main dish recipes. When prepared, couscous remains fluffy and separate, and readily takes on the flavors of the other foods cooked or served with it.

From couscous to rice pilaf to taboule to pasta, Near East offers more than 20 great-tasting grain-based products. Each is a good way to be sure you're getting your grains.

For more ideas on creative everyday cooking with Near East, call 1-800-399-4488 weekdays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. EST. Or, write to Consumer Response Near East Food Products, 7 New Lancaster Rd., Leominster, MA 01453.

Farm-City Banquet

Some of Sammons' noted activities include presentations for career day to university woman, Ag In the Classroom Teacher Seminars, a former exchangee for the Farm-City program, and two terms served on the county extension board of directors.

Each year the Farm City Council presents a Public Relations in Agriculture Award. This year, three organizations — Reading Fair, Oley Fair, and Kutztown Fair — were presented the award.

William Hughes, vice president for CoreStates Bank who presented the awards, said, "We can't recognize the hundreds of fine people who have tirelessly given their time, talent, and labor to entertain and educate the people of Berks County. Instead, we have chosen to recognize their end product — the fairs."

Dave Souders, vice president of the Reading Fair; Daniel Levengood, president of the Oley Fair; and Marcus Held Jr., president of the Kutztown Fair, accepted the awards.

The program also included presentations by Pennsylvania Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Chris Herr, Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Angela Werley, and Berks County Little Miss Dairy Princess Kelly Rohrbach. Ernest Heckman, president of the Farm-City Council, served as master of ceremonies for the evening.

Berks County Little Miss Dairy Princess Kelly Rohrbach sang a song promoting milk at the Berks County Farm-City Banquet.

SIMPLER, HEALTHIER HOLIDAY

The year-end holidays are upon us. And so are thoughts of getting together with family and friends to celebrate, give thanks, share gifts, and enjoy each other's company.

Why, then, do the holidays have a tendency to make us feel tired and depressed, frustrated and guilty, when we should feel energized and thankful?

It may be our own unrealistic expectations. Naturally, we want to make each holiday occasion rich and satisfying, particularly for any special people we have visiting. When the result is less than perfect, we're typically heartsick; sometimes, unfortunately, to the point of making our guests feel that it's all their fault.

How to avoid this scenario? Simple.

This year, put your holiday expectations into perspective. As you arrange your social and entertainment calendar, make sure to include time for yourself and your immediate family. And, when you organize your holiday menus, be sure they're not so complex you don't have time to enjoy yourself, your family and your guests.

To make your goals more obtainable this holiday season, stick to the following three resolutions:

- I am not going to overwork myself.

Be kind to yourself! An exhausted host or hostess isn't good company.

When planning your menus, consider choosing simple foods you know how to prepare. Consider what can be prepared ahead, then frozen (or held in another manner).

Think about having a potluck party where everybody brings something. Also, if holiday guests are staying over, don't be timid about serving leftovers or ordering out for pizza. A kitchen can seem like a dungeon if you're held captive there too long.

- I am not going to overspend.

As you rummage through holiday recipes, keep your food budget in mind. How can you enjoy a dinner knowing a large portion of the month's food budget is sitting on the table. If served attractively, recipes made with common household staples and an occasional special ingredient can be just as elegant as those that call for many expensive ingredients.

- I am going to serve simple, healthful food.

A conflict of interest often occurs when entertaining. We invite our friends into our homes as a way of expressing our friendship. We want to make sure they're happy and well-fed. Does this mean we need to serve elaborate, calorie-laden foods? Not at all.

A better statement of love and friendship is to serve a variety of simple foods that also are good for ones health.

The beauty of these three resolutions is that they complement each other. Simple, nutritious foods usually take less time to prepare and are less damaging to the budget than fancy, gourmet-type fare.

What more could you ask for in a healthy, happy holiday?

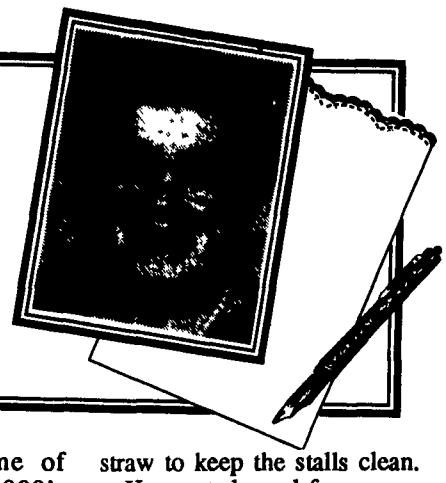
Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



Recently, I read some of George Washington's 1800's notes written to the managers of his farms, and I was impressed with his practical side. He gave a lot of time and attention to agriculture.

He rotated his crops and had his fields numbered. On his river farm he grew wheat, oats, corn, peas, turnips, potatoes, pumpkins, and buckwheat. He instructed his workers to take mud from the bed of the creek and make compost heaps to be used as manure.

The cattle were to be on pasture from May to November and then be housed. Sheep were to remain in one lot only for a week and then be penned. He even gave instructions on what to feed the oxen, horses, and mules in order to keep them healthy and in good condition for work. All animals were housed in sheds and bedded with leaves as there was insufficient straw to keep the stalls clean.

He wanted good fences except along the creek as he said that the boatmen would use the rails for firewood. There were Negro quarters on his farms and he expected all of his workers to follow his orders. He had a plan that was to be followed as he told them to keep certain jobs for fair weather and others for foul weather.

The instructions were to leave the meadows untilled. But, they were to grubb land along the creek at every convenient moment. He wanted to reclaim land and plant it to grass. The gullied parts of the fields were to be leveled and improved with rye and orchard grass or left uncultivated. He planned on buidling a bridge over a spring branch and he intended to plant corn in a field as far away from the squirrels as possible. He certainly was ahead of his time.

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece. They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within THREE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge. This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next three years.

Trained Dog Is Farmer's Best Friend

A gust of wind blows Dave Zimmerman's cap to the ground. And Belle, a golden retriever as beautiful as her name, leaps into action. After delivering the cap to Zimmerman's hand and accepting a pat on the head and some warm words, Belle settles in beside the farmer's wheelchair and waits for her next opportunity to help.

Belle is a trained Independence Dog. Zimmerman is a Minnesota farmer with a warm personality and a ready smile who came all the way to Chadds Ford, Penn., to receive Belle from Independence Dogs Inc. (IDI). In training the two to work together on a farm location, IDI brought Belle and Zimmerman to the University of Delaware farm in Newark. There, on the grounds of the College of Agricultural Sciences, the dog became familiar with farm sights, sounds and smells.

Zimmerman's entry into the world of the physically challenged came unexpectedly 10 years ago without the use of his legs. But Zimmerman couldn't be kept down. The following spring, his father-in-law installed a lift on a tractor and Zimmerman was back in the driver's seat sowing and cultivating crops and tending hogs.

However, his can-do spirit could take him only so far. Working on a farm can be hazardous and complicated, especially for farmers in wheelchairs. Zimmerman's break came when he was awarded a trained Independence Dog as the grand prize in the Great American Farm Dog Contest sponsored by Successful Farming magazine and Rhone-Poulenc Ag Company.

Training an Independence Dog costs between $10,000 and $12,000. Recipients are asked to make a minimum donation of $200 toward to cost of a custom harness. The non-profit organization was founded in 1984 by UD Alumni Wall of Fame member M. Jean King. IDI trains dogs for the mobility-impaired and placed about 11 dogs each year. King, who was diagnosed with tuberculosis of the spine 26 years ago, is the only founder of a service dog school who is dependent on a wheelchair for mobility. King says IDI chooses dogs from large working breds, including pure and mixed shepherds, retrievers, and rottweilers, who have size, strength, intelligence, willingness and a sound temperament.

Zimmerman had an additional requirement: a dog that was comfortable around noisy farm equipment and unpredictable livestock. He waited for two years for IDI to find just the right match. Belle had all the ingredients for making a perfect working partner for Zimmerman. After she completed training to become a fully certified Independence Dog, IDI arranged for several visits to the UD farm through Dr. Lesa Griffiths, swine nutrionist, to fine-tune Belle's training around livestock.

"Anytime we can make a connection like this in class, it's exciting," says Griffiths. "I invited Zimmerman and IDI trainer George Ridgik to talk to my swine production class about Zimmerman's experience as a swine producer and also about training Belle."

As part of her IDI training, Belle was exposed to environments ranging from churches and grocery stores to theaters and sporting events. Ridgik taught her to pull her partner up ramps, open heavy doors, pop a wheelchair over high curbs, pick up and carry telephone receivers to her partner, and carry packages in her specially constructed backpack. Belle also learned to stand and brace to that Zimmerman can transfer from his wheelchair to a chair, car or bed. She also can retreive dropped items ranging in size from a book to a dime.

Ridgik trained Belle with positive reinforcement rather than punishment. Every new situation was entered into gently with Ridgik working carefully with Belle to make sure the dog gained confidence in unfamiliar situations. On her first visit to the college's farm, Belle was nipped on her tail and legs by the hogs. Ridgik, careful not the traumatize Belle and have her become fearful of the livestock, placed the dog with younger piglets who viewed the dog as a cuddly teddy bear, perfect for snuggling. After an intensive three weeks of training, Belle and Zimmerman headed to Minnesota for the real test.

Belle passed. Tractors, combines and complicated farm gates have become second nature to her. And her interest in swine production matches that of Griffiths' students.

"Belle gets along real well," says Zimmerman. "If I'm at the farrowing barn taking care of a litter, she looks in there. She's curious about the older swine in the finishing barn, too. And when she's out in the field and I need her, I just give her a call and she comes right to me."

When Belle's not helping Zimmerman get in and out of a wheelchair or onto his tractor, opening gates, or even riding along on farm equipment, she lives the idyllic life of a dog in the country — chasing birds, running in fields and soaking up attention from any available person. The latter pleasure is filled by Zimmerman, his wife, Kimberly, and their daughters Brittany and Jessica, who all adore Belle.

Like any dog, Belle has her favorite routines. She sleeps on her own bed until 5 a.m., then hops onto Zimmerman's bed, curls up and snoozes for another hour or two. She spends evenings chasing her ball and enjoys the occasional treat of riding into town with Zimmerman.

In addition to being a successful farmer and positive role model, Zimmerman edits a newsletter for farmers who are physically challenged. "Fenceposts" includes reviews of new equipment and adaptations to farm machinery.

Minnesota farmer Dave Zimmerman and Belle, an independence dog, trained on the agricultural college's farm to get the service dog accustomed to farm sights, sounds, and smells. Dr. Lesa Griffiths offers Belle a piglet for investigation.

WITH TWIG WALKINGSTICK
Why does grass keep growing after its cut, but trees don't?
Grass doesn't have magical powers. The answer is in its growing point.
First, some basics. Plants don't grow like people do. Think about it. You grow all over. Your feet, head, body — every part of you is larger than when you were a baby. Plants, though, only grow at a few specific places, called growing points.
In trees, the main growing points are on the tiny shoots at the end of the branches. Other growing points hang out in the tips of the roots and just under the bark. These special parts build the entire tree, but they always stay at the same spot.
Grass, though, grows from a different kind of growing point. Turfgrass specialists call it a crown. Look really close at the base of a grass plant. You'll see a spot where the grass blade comes out of the plant and shoots upward — that spot is the crown.
If you chop down a tree at the base of the trunk, you knock off all the growing points on the branches — and most likely kill the tree in the process. But when your lawn mower cuts the grass blades, it doesn't destroy the part that keeps the grass growing. That's why you have to keep cutting your lawn. Happy mowing!
Scientifically yours,
Twig

Dauphin Extension Spotlights 4-H Growth

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The spotlight shone on 4-H at the annual Dauphin County Cooperative Extension meeting held Monday night.

About 300 people mingled in the Founder's Hall at the Milton Hershey School, where 4-H members set up displays of club activities. The evening festivities included a food reception, award presentations, and a viewing of the newly released video featuring Dauphin County 4-H.

The 4-H program has had a nine percent increase in enrollment since last year. About 2,338 members and 780 volunteers make up the program.

While the 4-H program prospers under the many volunteer leaders and parents who contribute time and energy to the program, Fred Rudy, extension agent, said that others often assist the program in behind-the-scenes duties. One of those is Dr. Richard Guise, who for 40 years has helped with the 4-H budget and has been supportive through Kiwanis Club involvement.

Rudy presented Guise with a Spirit of 4-H Award.

Other award winners included Marlin and Ellen Brubaker, for their many years as 4-H leaders; Kim Garris of Channel 27, who produced several television spots on extension programs; and Richard Hand, for his agricultural program leadership not only in the county but also the state.

Various perspectives of the 4-H program were given by school administrators, volunteers, and members.

School officials making an impact on the program included Joann Griffin, principal of Foose Elementary School; Bob Hassinger, principal of a Halifax Middle School; Marcia Paterson, director of the ag and environmental education program at Milton Hershey School; and Dr. William Lepley, president of Milton Hershey School.

Francis Shoop, who has been a 4-H volunteer for 27 years, told how she has watched her children and grandchildren excel in 4-H programs. "Now they're gone and I'm still here," the 75-year-old volunteer leader said.

Katy Deveney, a 12-year-member who studies occupational therapy at Elizabethtown College, told of the important role 4-H played in her life and the many side benefits that she continues to reap from her involvement in the program.

These included public speaking ability, confidence in meeting new people, organization, delegation, record keeping, time management, work ethics, and other life skills.

Randy Greider, president of the board of directors for Dauphin County Cooperative Extension, was honored for his six years of service.

Newly elected to the extension board were Audrey Maule and Jerry Miller.

Numerous 4-H clubs set up displays such as this Horse and Pony Club exhibit. From left are Rosemary Ortiz, member; Sue Orban, equine instructor and 4-H leader; Daisey Hallett, member; and Marcia Paterson, director of agricultrual and environmental.

Fred Rudy, Dauphin Extension agent at left, hands the Spirit of 4-H Award to Dr. Richard Guise, center, while Norm Miller, chairman of the 4-H development committee, looks on.

Retirement Sends Them To The Woodshed

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

SEVEN VALLEYS (York Co.) — Mahlon Groff looked around his shop one day and decided something had to be done.

Groff, who retired in 1993 from the maintenance crew at Penn State's York campus, wisely planned ahead before bidding his job farewell. He and his wife, Eleanor, had long enjoyed visiting wood craft shops around south-central Pennsylvania. Woodworking, in fact, intrigued him.

So he made some inquiries as to the best types of woodworking equipment, moved it into his former poultry shed, which already served as a shop, and bought in a supply of pine lumber. Before long, the lumber had been transformed into pieces of furniture, attractive shadowboxes and a myriad of whimsical wooden decorative pieces.

"The little shop got so full we had to sell something," the couple jokes about how Woodshed Crafts came into being. Groff interrupted his creative woodworking just long enough to turn a piece of that lumber into a shop sign, hung it out on the front of the former chicken house, and was in the crafts business.

Though they have chosen not to travel the craft show circuit, the Groffs will participate in the November 23 "Christmas in Loganville" event. Ten Loganville-area churches, fire company and local businesses, will be part of the southern York County town's popular holiday "open house," held in conjunction with a large craft show hosted at the Loganville-Springfield Elementary School. The Christmas in Loganville craft show is the only public event at which the Groff's display their creations.

Now, Groff works eight-hour days at his "retirement hobby," and the couple generally spends several additional hours during winter evenings painting his designs. He and Eleanor continue to visit other woodcrafting shops and displays around the region, often finding inspiration in ideas they spot in their travels.

Shadowboxes, for instance, are an item that Groff has customized from designs he has seen elsewhere. Many shadowboxes are made with several identical-sized squares in which small items can be placed for display. Groff adds recessed doors, designs the sections in varying sizes and shapes, even puts a wide stand on the bottom so the boxes can be either hung on the wall or set on a flat surface. In addition to the popular house shape, Groff builds shadowboxes designed as barns and schoolhouses.

"He has never bought a pattern," says Eleanor, adding "Mahlon has the ideas. I just look at them and sometimes suggest little changes that might improve on them."

Both the Groffs are involved in painting the shop's wooden designs, though neither has ever taken a tole or decorative painting class. Mahlon works on the more intricate items and lettering, while Eleanor has boxes of wooden cutouts waiting at her painting table.

"Mahlon can look at things and tell how they can be painted," his wife notes with admiration. A wooden recipe box with a winter scene painted on the front is just one testimony to his talent for looking at a picture and transferring it to acrylic artwork.

Eleanor did attend a one-day oil painting seminar, though the acrylics in which they work are a quicker-drying medium and much more easily cleaned up. But she still recalls that the instructor cautioned her students that day that, once they began painting, they would never look at the world in the same way.

"And that's true," she relates. "Before that, things were pretty. Now, they're still pretty, but I look at how they're painted."

For the fall season, Eleanor has been painting dozens of leaf-shaped wood pieces, from large, life-size maple leaf reproductions to diminutive oakleaf shapes.

"We get all these leaves in the yard and one day we were away and I found her picking up leaves," teases Mahlon.

"Well, we didn't have that particular color leaf in our yard," she retorts with a grin.

For the past several weeks, the saws and paintbrushes at Woodshed Crafts have been rarely

(Turn to Page B15)

An array of colorful decorative and useful wood creations surround Mahlon and Eleanor Groff in their Woodshed Crafts display room. They credit friends with their encouragement to turn the hobby into a business.

After eight hours of woodworking in the shop, Mahlon puts in several more most evenings applying colorful acrylics to his designs. Eleaner is also usually painting just a few feet away at her own work area.

A modest Mahlon Groff chose the name Woodshed Crafts for his hobby/business because he did not want his shop to sound "too professional."

Groff's woodworking talents fill their country home, decorated with items like the handcrafted and painted recipe box held by Eleanor. The schoolhouse shadowbox on the wall has the whimsical touch of its own woodshed to one side, while the dry sink is also one of Mahlon's own designs.

Groff has never purchased a pattern. He just looks at something and can tell how it should be cut out and painted.

still, as the Groffs readied a supply of colorful fall, Thanksgiving and Christmas seasonal items.

Cornhusk replicas and bright orange wooden pumpkins, wearing Pilgrim hats occupy shelf space next to jaunty snowmen, bright pine poinsettias, delicate creche' cutouts and doll-sized wooden sleighs. Mahlon's handcrafted furniture pieces, like attractive shelves, cabinets and dry sinks do double-duty as display settings for the smaller items.

The Groff's family and friends have been their best encouragement to go into the crafts business, they credit. Two of their 11 grandchildren, whose family lives nearby, especially enjoy the shop and learning to work with wood. The youngest, at 6, is one of their most enthusiastic volunteers in helping with the display at the Christmas in Loganville show and looking forward to another busy day helping her grandparents.

Woodshed Crafts is located south of Loganville, on Ridge View Road. Hours are "whenever we're home, but never on Sundays," say the Groffs, who can be reached by phone at (717) 428-1212.

The 12th annual Christmas in Loganville craft show on Saturday, November 23 will run from 10 a.m. through 5 p.m. at the Loganville-Springfield Elementary School, located just off Exit 3 of Interstate 83. Other community participants will be open varying hours throughout the day and include the Loganville Fire Company, local churches Emmanuel Methodist, Christ Lutheran, St. Peter's (Yellow Church) and Codorus Church of the Brethren, also the site of the Vilalge Library's used book sale. Local businesses taking part are Brown's Orchard and Farm Market, H&B Antiques Emporium, York County True Value, and K&M Home Center.

Beef Tenderness Not The Mystery Some Believe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — A preacher I know says he can find a Bible verse to support about any moral point of view. The catch, depending upon what you want to prove, is that you might have to stand on the one verse and ignore all the rest of what is written on the subject.

I never put him to the test, but I know what he means. On a completely different subject, I can find research to prove about any point of view on the relationship between beef marbling and tenderness. However, if you read all the research that has been done it's difficult to come to but one conclusion — the two are tied closely together.

Those who believe there is no significant relationship between marbling and tenderness quote a single U.S. Meat Animal Reserch Center research project citing a low correlation between marbling and tenderness. It's valid research, but it's only one verse out of the big research book.

Four research projects, three of which were conducted at the Meat Animal Research Center and one at Oklahoma State University in 1992, 1994 and 1995, show a strong correlation between tenderness and marbling. Furthermore, the research at least suggests that the heritabilities and genetic correlations may not be the same for all breeds and classes of cattle. This could possibly explain the results of the single research project that seems to be at odds with the other four.

To briefly summarize, the four research projects demonstrate that the heritability of tenderness is moderately low, and the heritability of marbling is moderately high. The genetic correlation between marbling and tenderness is moderately high. Therefore if cattle producers select for marbling, tenderness will also improve. This is especially significant because it appears there are few antaognistic genetic relationships that exist between carcass traits and other production traits of economic merit.

Scientific cattle research aside, the market is calling for carcasses with more marbling in order to satisfy consumer demand. Consumers don't read college research. But they are telling cattle producers that well marbled beef is more tasty and tender and they want more of it than the industry is supplying.

We at the American Angus Association know that there are not enough cattle to supply the demand for lean beef that grades average Choice or higher. But it is not just the American Angus Association and our Certified Angus Beef Program that needs more high quality cattle to produce lean, well-marbled carcasses.

A recent article in Cattle Buyers Weekly reported that SYSCO, which sells Supreme Angus Beef, with marbling in the upper two-thirds of the USDA Choice grade, could boost annual sales from the 12 million pounds to as much as 20 million pounds if they could get the beef.

The National Beef Quality Audit also showed that there is a market for more higher quality beef than is being produced. Essentially they recommend that the percentage of Choice be increased from 53 percent to 64 percent of total beef produced, and Prime production should be boosted from 2.3 percent to 7 percent. Only 29 percent should be Select compared to nearly 37 percent available today, and the 8 percent Standard and lower grades should be eliminated.

I am not arguing that we know everything we need to know about beef tenderness. That is obvious. What we must do as an industry, however, is first accept the fact that we are producing a lot of the wrong kind of cattle. Futhermore, these cattle are wrong for the long range future of our business. Starting today we should use all the information we have available to speed improvement.

We can't wait and hope for some new development to save us. Until something better comes along, we can select for marbling and improve beef tenderness at the same time. Industry-wide application of this genetic fact would help us dramatically improve consumer acceptance of beef.

Hunters To Share The Bounty

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Hunters participating in the "Hunters Sharing the Harvest" (HSH) project are expected to donate tons of venison to hungry Pennsylvanians.

Last year, almost 90,000 pounds of donated deer meat reached the plates of the state's needy families and individuals. Now in its sixth year, the statewide program coordinates the efforts of hunters and game processors to channel deer meat to food banks throughout the Keystone state.

During the 1996 hunting season, the program sponsors, Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals (PRUA), expect the project to expand and make even greater amounts of venison available for distribution. The HSH program attracted the attention of the State Legislature, and through the efforts of Rep. Matthew Baker(R-Bradford, Tioga) and Sen. Roger Madigan, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, amendments were added to the donated food liability act to specifically state that wildlife can be donated and distributed by charitable organizations.

According to Baker, "Although hunters have been donating venison for years, with these amendments there leaves no question that wildlife can and should be donated and distributed by charitable organizations."

This legislation (HB 664) has passed both the Senate and House and is expected to be signed by Gov. Tom Ridge. "This legislation will bring together a working relationship between the Pennsylvania Game Commission and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to further heighten the concern and caring Pennsylvania hunters have," said Madigan.

Pennsylvania food banks indicate they never have enough meat products to fill the need, so they hope more hunters will be motivated by the amended legislation to make venison donations.

Conservation groups, hunting clubs, and interested individuals are encouraged to give their extra deer meat to the needy through the HSH service project. Contributions can range from a few pounds of ground meat to steaks to an entire deer. Hunters can get involved in the "Hunters Sharing the Harvest" project by contacting their local game processor or butcher, or their local or regional food bank to make arrangements to donate venison.

For the third year, billboards advertising the project have been strategically placed on major roads to remind successful hunters to share their venison. Penn Advertising, York, supported the program by donating outdoor advertising space. HSH has also received support from the Blue Mountain and Lehigh Valley Chapters of Safari Club International, and the Pennsylvania Deer Association, along with promotional assistance from the Pennsylyania Game Commission and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

A National Park Service project to thin the deer population at Gettysburg National Military Park is running concurrent with the Hunters Sharing the Harvest program and has taken advantage of its established distribution network. The effort to reduce the burgeoning deer herd began in 1995, when 503 deer were harvested from the battlefield area. More than 30,000 pounds of venison were given to local food banks, which in turn provided more than 60,000 meals for needy families.

Bert Frost, wildlife biologist with the National Park Service, told HSH, "One of the most important aspects in the reduction of deer on parkland is the ability to utilize the meat." With the venison sharing program already in place, distribution of the meat has been facilitated.

Funds are needed to continue to prepare the deer harvested in the park for use by food banks. Individuals and groups are encouraged to sponsor processing of the venison, which can be underwritten for $22 a head. One sponsor noted that this is a small price to pay to feed meat to more than 100 hungry Pennsylvanians. Interested individuals and groups can mail their checks for deer processing to HSH Coordinator Kenneth Brandt at 3317 Turnpike Road, Elizabethtown, PA 17022.

More information about "Hunters Sharing the Harvest" or the PRUA organization is available by writing to HSH Coordinator Kenneth Brandt, 3317 Turnpike Road, Elizabethtown, PA 17022.

Hunters Sharing the Harvest program gets boost from the Pennsylvania General Assembly, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and Pennsylvania Game Commission. From left, Charles C. Brosius, secretary of agriculture; State Sen. Rogert A. Madigan; Donald C. Madl, executive director of Pennsylvania Game Commission; Michael Markham, representing United States Tobacco who underwrite the program; and Kenneth Brandt, program coordinator.

Meeting Examines Farming For The Long Run

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Land, machinery, and fertilizer/weed management inputs are the major crop enterprise costs in Pennsylvania. The key to remaining profitable with field crops is to manage the major costs.

"If producers understand how these costs influence a dominant portion of the crop enterprise budget," said Mena Hautau, extension agent, Penn State Cooperative Extension-Berks County, "then producers are well on their way to making better farming decisions."

Producers that want to improve skills in partial budgeting are invited to participate in a three-part meeting series called "Farming For The Long Run." The meetings will emphasize group discussion by participants and speakers.

Topics include nitrogen and soil fertility, machinery costs, and land and rental arrangements. The dates are Dec. 19, Jan. 9, and Jan. 16, from 10 a.m. to noon. The meetings will be held at the Berks County Ag Center.

Registration cost is $25 per person and includes refreshments, lunch, and materials. Registration is limited to 20 participants.

For registration information, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension-Berks County, P.O. Box 520, Leesport, PA (610) 378-1327, or fax (610) 378-7961. Registration deadline is Dec. 6.

DEVELOPMENTS IN NEW POULTRY VACCINES AND DELIVER SYSTEMS

Barret S. Cowen, M.S., Ph.D.
Wiley Laboratory,
Department of Veterinary Science

The U.S. poultry industry has been expanding rapidly during the last several decades. Nationally, more than seven billion chickens and turkeys are produced annually. This number is likely to increase as our poultry industry is taking advantage of the tremendous opportunities arising in the global market.

Commercial poultry are raised in large flocks under intensive rearing conditions. Health management is a difficult task in closed flocks that are continuously exposed to environmental pathogens.

Vaccines are an integral part of managing the health of commercial poultry. Current pountry vaccines consist primarily of attenuated live-virus and inactivated, oil-emulsion vaccines.

At the 46th North Central Avian Disease Conference and Symposium on New Vaccines and Delivery Systems (Sept. 17-19, 1995 in Bloomington, Minn.), Dr. J.M. Sharma, of the University of Minnesota, stated in his presentation, titled "Vaccines for the Year 2000," that molecular technology is ushering in an era of new methods for developing vaccines and their delivery systems and ways to enhance the immune responsiveness to vaccines. Additionally, he said that the first genetically engineered pox virus-vectored vaccines for chickens has already been licensed by the USDA and that other virus-vectored vaccines (that is, recombinant herpesvirus of turkeys) are being tested and should be available in the foreseeable future. Vaccines that contain live deletion mutants, immunogenic subunits, or naked DNA are being evaluated under laboratory conditions.

Among some 15 presentations on new vaccines and delivery systems presented at the Minnesota symposium and conference general session, there was one particulary interesting paper I would like to share with you. The paper was titled "Virus - Antibody Complex Vaccines" and was presented by Dr. C.E. Whitfill of Embrex Inc., Research Triangle Park, N.C. Whitfull stated that a novel concept in vaccine development utilizes a specific antiserum that is mixed (in the proper ratio) with a virus to form a virus-antibody complex that can be administered by inoculation. He indicated this technology has been successfully employed in the development of an IBDV-antibody complex vaccine for administration to chickens.

This novel vaccine allows for a "delayed release" of the virus from the virus-antibody complex. The technology employed can improve vaccine safety and efficacy by 1) making the post hatch use of live-virus vaccines safer; 2) allowing more virulent viruses, normally recommended for secondary vaccinations, to be used safely for primary vaccinations; 3) making in ovo use of some live-virus vaccines possible; and 4) providing protective immunity in the face of maternal antibodies.

In the case of the IBDV-antibody vaccine, the antibody does not completely neutralize or inactivate the virus (because a precise amount of antibody is mixed with the virus to form a virus-antibody complex prior to administration); rather, it delays the onset of pathologic changes in the bursa of Fabricius. This delay in vaccine virus replication in the bursa occurs at a time when it is both safer for the chicken to respond to the virus and for the virus to overcome the negative effects of maternal antibody.

Several batches of experimental IBDV-antibody vaccine have been shown to be safe and protective by in ovo administration to specific-pathogen-free White Leghorn with no maternal IBDV antibody and to broilers with maternal IBDV antibody. These trials demonstrated delayed bursal infection, absence of immunosuppression, and enhanced immunity as evidenced by a greater percentage of birds seroconverting to IBDV and being protected against a standard IBDV challenge than that observed with a conventional IBDV vaccine. An IBDV-antibody vaccine has been subjected to efficacy and field safety tests in the USA and was recently licensed by the USDA for day-of-age administration. A similar IBDV-antibody vaccine has been developed for use in ovo in the United Kingdom.

More recently (Oct. 23-25, 1996) another novel vaccine being developed to distinguish ILT vaccine virus from field isolates of ILTV was described by Dr. C.L. Keeler, Jr., of the University of Delaware, at the 31st National Meeting on Poultry Health and Processing (Ocean City, Md.). Because of the fact that costly ILT outbreaks occur much to frequently (the disease is endemic) on the Delmarva Peninsula and in other intensive broiler rearing areas of the USA, there is a need to determine whether these outbreaks result from vaccine virus or field virus. To date, there have been no methods developed which can clearly and easily differentiate ILTV strains; i.e. we are unable to determine whether specific ILT outbreaks are caused by field isolates of ILTV, mutated ILT vaccine strains, or latent ILTV (ILTV, live other herpesviruses, can establish a latent carrier state in recovered chickens). Therefore, Dr. Keeler thinks that a safe and effective recombinant ILT vaccine will be of great benefit to the poultry industry. However, he state that the question of vaccine stability and a determination of the source of specific ILT outbreaks are issues which will need to be addressed before such a vaccine will be accepted by the industry. Dr. Keeler and associates are in the early stages of this project which entails constructing uncomplicated, vaccines that can be easily monitored in the field and that can be evaluated in experiments designed to investigate the stability of ILT vaccine strains used and their recombination potential.

The genome of ILTV is divided into two regions of unique DNA with one of these regions (small in size) being composed of primarily nonessential (i.e. genes which are not required for virus replication and are not involved in pathogenic processes) genese. Dr. Keeler's research team will remove (using molecular techniques) two of these nonessential genes (US2 and gX) and replace them with markers (tags) which produce blue and fluorescent plaques (i.e. when the viruses are grown in cell culture) that can be used to determine if recombined ILT viruses are in cell culture) that can be used to determine if recombined ILT viruses are a potential problem in the spread of ILT. Dr. Keeler explained that this use of molecular techniques, on a simple scale, allows researchers to apply these tools to currently used commercial products to enhance our ability to answer basic questions about the biological characteristics of viruses (e.g. genetic stability and spread of ILTV).

In summary, this article is an attempt to provide a few examples (among many) of the exciting advances being made in the development of vaccines and delivery systems, using new technologies, which the industry hopes will result in safer and more efficacious vaccines in the foreseeable future for the poultry industry.

Mexican Ambassador Visits Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Mexican Ambassador to the United States, Jesus Silva Herzog, visited Pennsylvania last week to discuss opportunities for strengthening trade relations between Pennsylvania and Mexico.

Since the North American Free Trade Agreement, trade between Mexico and Pennsylvania has increased. Delegations from the country have visited state officials in Harrisburg since NAFTA was implemented, but this was the first time since then that the Mexican ambassador has visited the state.

After being welcomed to the state by Gov. Tom Ridge, in the Rotunda of the state Capital, Ambassador Herzog and Mexican Consul General Manuel Lombera, along with Mexican Consul Adjunct Carlos Giralt-Cabrales, and Consul of Mexico Elena Uribe, met privately with the governor to discuss trade.

Then, according to a news release, Herzog and his entourage met with state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius to discuss agricultural trade relations.

Among the items discussed, it was emphasized that trade must work with equal fairness for both Pennsylvania and Mexico.

"I believe trade is a sharing of products and information, and it is a two-way street. Meeting informally allows us to build a bridge of mutual trust and respect," Brosius said.

Some of Pennsylvania's agricultural industry leaders joined Secretary Brosius and the delegation led by Ambassador Herzog in the discussions, which are part of continuing efforts to expand opportunities for Pennsylvania's agricultural producers and food processors.

According to the ag department news release, there have been some "promising" discussions between officials from Mexico and the Pennsylvania Christmas tree growers to find a way to allow Pennsylvania Christmas trees to reach Mexican markets.

According to the news release, "Questions were raised with regard to the difficulties of exporting Pennsylvania apples and other fresh produce (to Mexico), with the ambassador promising to investigate the situation."

From the left are Carlos Giralt-Cabrales, consul of Mexico; state Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr., chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee; Jesus Silva Herzog, Mexican ambassador to the United States; Charles Brosius, state secretary of agriculture; Manuel Lombera, consul general of Mexico; Elena Uribe, consul of Mexico.

Farm Equipment Division Earns Certification

BRILLION, Wis. — The Brillion Iron Works Farm Equipment Division has officially received ISO 9001 certification, according to the division's product manager, Lee Kortens. The company also received ISO 9002 certification for the foundry division.

"We're very proud to receive ISO certification," Kortens said. "We look at it as a confirmation that we've been on the right track all along. We've always held Brillion products to our own very high standards of quality — the difference is that now we're being recognized for it by an important worldwide organization. And that's very gratifying."

Kortens said that the benefit of ISO certification to Brillion's customers is continued and added confidence that Brillion implements are built for outstanding performance season after season.

ISO 9000 series certification is based on criteria established by the International Organization for Standardization in Geneva, Switzerland, according to Brillion. ISO 9001 standards address system requirements for product design, development, production, installation and service. ISO 9002 addresses all of these except design.

Tractors Have 'Synchromesh' Transmission

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Farmers looking for performance at an affordable price should look at the new Belarus 8000 and 9000 Series tractors. Both include new features and a new look with the same exceptional value farmers and ranchers expect from Belarus.

The Belarus 8000 and 9000 Series tractors have a new, easy-to-use "synchromesh" transmission with 14 forward and four reverse speeds. They also have an improved turning radius for better maneuverability, an independent 540/1000 PTO, and a Category II 3-point hitch with draft, position, and down pressure.

Ideal for tasks ranging from loader applications to planting, the 8000 Series features four 81 horsepower models. The two-wheel drive models 8011 and 8311, and the four-wheel drive models 8045 and 8345 are available in a cab or a ROPS design.

The 9000 Series tractors feature four versatile 98 horsepower turbo-charged models in cab or ROPS designs. You can select from the two-wheel drive 9011 or 9311, or the rugged four-wheel drive 9045 or 9345.

The new Belarus 8000 and 9000 series tractors provide farmers with high performance.

White Oak Mills Holds Grower Appreciation Banquet

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — In an effort to recognize its contract swine finishing producers, White Oak Mills Inc held a grower appreciation banquet recently at the Port Royal Fire Hall, Port Royal.

Following a stuffed pork chop dinner, John Chapman, White Oak's senior vice president of pork production, discussed "White Oak Mills . . . Past, Present and Future." During his presentation, Chapman highlighted White Oak's new strategic plan and its long-term commitment to Pennsylvania swine production.

"The main focus of White Oak's pork production division is three-site production, which will improve market hog health and performance and will allow finishing floors to be filled quickly with single-source pigs," Chapman noted.

To accomplish its plan, White Oak has selected Newsham Hybrids as its sole genetic supplier. Approximately 900 Newsham grandparent animals have populated White Oak's Willow Hill multiplier facility, which will provide parent females for all its commercial units. In turn, their offspring will produce market hogs that have improved growth performance and quality.

Meanwhile, White Oak continues to utilize consultants from Carl S. Akey Inc., a swine nutrition company located in Lewisburg, Ohio, as well as several other independent industry expert consultants to remain technologically advanced and efficient. Also, the company has implemented an intense training program for all swine facility managers and White Oak personnel.

Licensing Agreement Adds To Revenue Stream

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation said that a licensing agreement to provide Bt technology to Golden Harvest Seeds, Inc. adds to a stream of revenues from Dekalb's Bt patent portfolio.

Golden Harvest plans to offer a YieldGard gene for insect-protected corn next spring in its hybrid corn lineup, licensing the technology of both Dekalb and Monsanto Company.

"The licensing agreement with Golden Harvest is further confirmation of the economic value of the Bt technology held by Dekalb and Monsanto," said Bruce P. Bickner, Dekalb's chairman and chief executive officer. "This is another important step in the generation of licensing revenues from Dekalb's extensive portfolio of intellectual property."

In the last year, the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office has granted Dekalb nine patents, most of which relate to products with herbicide or insect resistance or to the transformation methods used to develop them. Among them are product patents for insect-resistant corn as well as transgenic corn that is resistant to the herbicides glyphosate and glufosinate. In January 1996, Dekalb and Monsanto entered into a research collaboration and signed three cross-licensing agreements, one of which covers certain technology relating to insect-resistant corn.

High Capacity Blowers For Heavy, Wet Snow

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland Model 718C snow blowers are designed to clear heavy, wet or hard, frozen and drifted snow from rural roads or city streets quickly and efficiently to minimize traffic interruption.

The new rear-mount units are available in three sizes for 40 to 200 HP tractors. All feature hydraulic spout control that lets operators change blowing direction from the tractor seat. Optional tall discharge chute allows truck loading where snow must be trucked off site.

The 84-inch Model 716C is designed for 40 to 100 PTO HP tractors. It has a single cutting auger and 27-inch, 540 RPM fan. Like the larger units, it can be used on either Category II or III 3-point hitches.

The 96-inch unit has two augers for 48-inch cut and is suggested for 80 to 150 PTO HP tractors. Drive can be either 540 or 100 RPM and Category II or III 3-point hitch.

The 108-inch wide unit also has two augers and cuts 48 inches deep, has 540 or 1000 RPM drive and is suggested for 120 to 200 PTO HP tractors. Both 96- and 108-inch units use 30-inch fans operating at PTO speed. Both have replaceable cutting edges for long life and easy maintenance.

Three new high capacity New Holland snow blowers rear mount on tractors of 40 to 200 PTO HP. Used with hydrostatic drive New Holland Bidirectional™ tractors, the new units offer exceptional snow removal capability.

The new snow blowers offer exceptioinal snow removal efficiency if used with New Holland Bidirectional™ hydrostatic drive tractors, said New Holland Product Analyst Mark Pavcik.

Early Weaning May Increase Profits, Rebreeding

KANSAS CITY, Mo — Many cattlemen have always weaned at the same time each season. While this may be profitable for your operation, it may be beneficial to consider weaning calves earlier that the normal 200-270 days of age.

Recent studies are showing that when faced with limited feed supplies, low-quality pastures or special situations, early weaning may allow a practical way to efficiently use feed resources while still obtaining satisfactory calf gains.

Early weaning merits special consideration when you're trying to improve the rebreeding of first-calf heifers. The stresses of lactation, growth and preparation for rebreeding are especially severe in first-calf heifers, and may result in a conception delay. Nursing delays the female's ability to recycle after calving and early weaning decreases the interval between calving and estrus.

Dr. John Hough, director of research and performance for the American Hereford Association, said that early weaning to improve fertility of first-calf heifers may be done when calves are 35 to 60 days old.

"Studies from Clemson University have shown that 81 percent of heifers whose calves were weaned at 56 days of age calved within the first 30 days of the following calving season. Only 46 percent of heifers subjected to normal weaning calved within the same period," he said.

Early weaning can also make the best use of marginal- or lower-quality forage by dry cows. Calves can be put into drylot or fed grain while on pasture to achieve efficient gains. Dry cows can then be placed on lower-quality pasture as their nutrient requirements are lower.

The most critical period for early-weaned calves is the first two weeks after weaning. Calves must overcome the stress of weaning and learn to eat feed very quickly. Hough said palatable feed, good management, and good facilities to reduce stress will decrease any riskiness associated with early weaning.

"Don't forget vaccination," Hough said. "At weaning, all calves should be vaccinated for blackleg and malignant edema. Pasteurella vaccines may also be considered. And it's a good idea to vaccinate a couple weeks prior to weaning so that immunity will be established when the calves are weaned. Your local veterinarian can recommend a vaccination program suited to your area."

Calves should be put in a small pen with some type of shelter available. Smaller pens are preferred over larger lots because the larger areas encourage fence walking and make it more difficult to find feed and water.

"The final and most important step of weaning calves early is nutrition," Hough said. "A properly balanced ration will get younger calves up and running and discourage any potential problems."

Your veterinarian or county extension office can provide more information about early weaning, nutrition programs, and weaning practices.

Fertilize Before Deficiency Occurs

NORCROSS, Ga. — Seeing is believing. Have you ever heard that adage? Most of us have. It applies to many things ... including deficiencies of plant nutrients such as phosphorus and potassium.

So once we can see actual symptoms of nutrient deficiency on our crop it is time to apply fertilizer, right? After all, this approach eliminates the possibility of applying fertilizer where it might not be needed.

No, this is the wrong approach. Once a symptom appears, it is too late. Some yield and perhaps quality have already been lost.

Plants initially do not show obvious symptoms of nutrient deficiency other than slower growth which can be due to many factors. And, in the case of a mild deficiency, they may never show a visual symptom. A nutrient deficiency causes a disruption in any number of essential metabolic processes within the plant which causes growth to slow and to eventually cease in severe cases. Crops mature unevenly because deficiencies rarely occur uniformly across entire fields. This leads to less yield, harvesting difficulties and lower quality of the harvested product. And as previously stated, this can all occur without diagnostic symptoms appearing.

Another problem is that not all deficiencies produce clear-cut symptoms. Or for a particular nutrient, one crop may do so and another not. Then there is the possibility of multiple deficiencies. The most severe will likely be manifested. Once that deficiency is corrected then the secondary one will manifest itself. All the time the crop is losing yield.

True, a nutrient deficiency can be corrected within the growing season. And growth will resume at a maximum rate under optimum conditions. But the plant frequently has lost some percentage of its yield potential that will not be regained. This is especially true in weather-limited growing seasons.

Seeing is believing. But in the case of nutrient deficiencies, seeing is too late.

Etherton Named Distinguished Professor At Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. Terry Etherton, an international authority on growth hormones and agricultural biotechnology, has been named distinguished professor of animal nutrition at Penn State.

The title of distinguished professor was established by the office of the president to recognize a select group of professors with exceptional accomplishments in teaching, research, and service.

Etherton was nominated for the honor by his colleagues and by Dr. James Starling, past interim dean, and Dr. Theodore Alter, interim dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. "I am thrilled and very grateful to receive this prestigious honor," Etherton said.

Etherton has developed an internationally recognized research program in animal growth. His studies were the first to establish that treating pigs with recombinantly derived porcine growth hormone (pGH) improves growth rate and productive efficiency, increases muscle mass and decreases carcass fat. His work has played an important role in the development of a pGH-based product for the swine industry.

Etherton teaches graduate courses in nutrition and animal growth as well as an undergraduate course in animal growth and development. He also is a leading authority in the public discussion about the safety, efficacy and benefits of agricultural biotechnology.

Etherton was raised on a grain and livestock farm near Mason City, Ill. He received his bachelor's in agricultural science and master's in animal science from the University of Illinois in 1971 and 1974, and received his doctorate in animal science from the University of Minnesota in 1978.

Etherton was a National Institutes of Health postdoctoral fellow in the Department of Medicine at Stanford University from 1978 to 1979, when he joined Penn State's dairy and animal science department. In 1986-87 he took a sabbatical leave to work at Children's Hospital at the University of California, San Francisco.

Etherton has been the recipient of several national research awards. In 1991, he received Penn State's highest honor for excellence in research when he was awarded the University Faculty Scholar Medal in Life and Health Sciences. In 1993, he received the Alex and Jessie C. Black Award for Excellence in Research from the College of Agricultural Sciences.

He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Institute of Nutrition, the American Society of Animal Science and the Endocrine Society.

Etherton also chaired the National Research Council subcommittee on the effect of metabolism modifiers on nutrient requirements of food-producing animals. He serves on the editorial board of the American Journal of Physiology, the International Food Information Council's expert panel, and the American Council on Science and Health's board of scientific advisers.

LAPP'S BARN EQUIPMENT

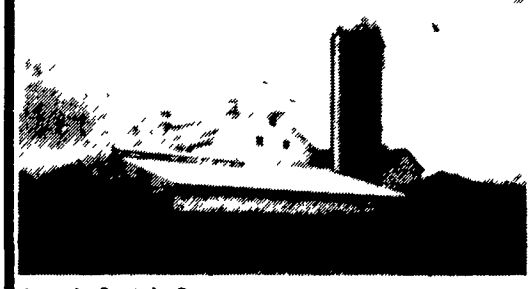
CURTAIN SYSTEMS



Lapp's Curtain System

Lapp's insulated curtains can help you make your farm more efficient. You can save up to 30% on your fuel/energy costs while maintaining a comfortable climate enables livestock to feed into live weight more efficiently, the curtain makes your barn warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Our curtains are available in both 4 and 6 ply, both of which are faced with a impervious white vinyl layer which faces the elements. With all these benefits, the average payback is two years!

A lower cost alternative to the insulated curtains, are Lapp's single layer curtains. You still get all the benefits of using a high quality curtain to keep the elements outside and being able to lower the curtain to naturally ventilate in your barn.

Fall Brings Changes To Ponds, Too

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The fall season does more than change the color of leaves. It also causes Ohio's pond owners to make some management decisions as ponds prepare for winter, said Eric Norland, Ohio State extension specialist in natural resources.

But lowering water levels to control an overabundance of pond plant life is probably not a good idea, Norland said.

As water on the pond surface cools to below 40 degrees Fahrenheit, it sinks and pushes other water from the bottom to the top. Autumn winds enhance this water turnover.

"The mixing of the water is good, because it helps cleanse the pond," Norland said. "Gases that are trapped in the water from decaying plant and animal life are released into the atmosphere."

The increased exposure of water to the atmosphere also allows more oxygen to dissolve into the pond. Dissolved oxygen is important to pond life, because fish and other aquatic animals need oxygen to survive.

From September through November, many aquatic plants are preparing for the winter. They turn brown and many fall over, but they have ways of surviving the cold, Norland said. Cattails, water lilies, and other perennials have thick underground stems called rhizomes that store food, mainly starches, that will be used in the spring when the plants begin to sprout again.

Duckweed, a tiny floating plant, also accumulates starches and sinks to the pond bottom under its own weight where it overwinters. In the spring, the plants rise to the pond's surface as the starch reserves are used.

Waterweed and other pondweed species produce special shoots called winter buds. Each bud contains a plant embryo and food reserves, Norland said. In the fall, the buds detach from the parent plant and sink to the bottom of the pond. As the food reserves are used up in the spring, the new plants float to the surface. Aquatic plants begin new spring growth in April or May, depending on the weather.

"Aquatic plant growth is beneficial to a pond, because the plants release oxygen into the water," Norland said.

But too many plants can be a problem. As plants die, they use oxygen in the water to decay. If too many plants die at once, fish could suffocate from a lack of dissolved oxygen. Control of aquatic plant growth should be done in the spring, Norland said.

Some pond owners try to control overgrowth of plants by lowering pond water levels in the fall. They think freezing in the pond bottom will kill plants that are overwintering there. Norland said, But this pond drawdown method of weed control doesn't work well in Ohio, because the state's winter weather is typically not cold or dry enough.

Fall also is a good time for pond owners to deal with muskrat problems. Muskrats burrow into pond dams and embankments and may cause them to leak or completely fail, Norland said. The legal trapping season for muskrat in Ohio this year is Nov. 13 through Jan. 31. However, trapping can be done at any time, provided the pond owner acquires a special permit from the county wildlife officer.

High Alfalfa Prices Require Forage Management

COLUMBUS, Ohio — With Ohio's alfalfa prices ranked second-highest in the nation, dairy farmers should carefully plan their forage needs for winter, said Maurice Eastridge, an Ohio State University dairy specialist.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's price report showed that Ohio's alfalfa prices are $130 per ton, a $45 per ton increase from the same time last year. Texas' prices lead the nation at $140 per ton.

Ohio's all-hay prices, which include alfalfa, are fourth in the nation, averaging $105 per ton. That is a $35 per ton increase for the same time last year, the USDA reported.

Eastridge said Ohio's problems stemmed from winter soil heaving that damaged alfalfa stands and a rainy spring that delayed first cutting.

"We had a difficult forage year," Eastridge said.

Other feed sources aren't doing so well either, Eastridge said. Spring rains delayed corn plantings, resulting in low yields of corn silage, he said. In addition, spring rains delayed plantings for feed grains, resulting in a second straight year of unseasonably high prices for corn grain and soybean meal.

The forage and feed grains problem come at a tough time because Ohio's milk production per cow has been dropping since last year, Eastridge said. The problems started in 1995 when an extremely hot summer cut into cows' output. That was further compounded by poor-quality alfalfa production, he said.

To cope with the current trend of high prices and low supplies, farmers need to check forage inventories now to determine how long supplies will last, Eastridge said. They should test hay to determine grain supplementation strategies. Farmers can have hay tested through a private laboratory or by Ohio State's Research/Extension Analytical Laboratory (REAL). Farmers can get test kits from their local extension office or by calling REAL directly at (330) 263-3760.

Farmers who need hay should contract now, because prices peak annually in winter, Eastridge said. Farmers might also consider planting winter wheat or rye to extend their forage supplies to next year's harvest.

"Decide upon a forage feeding program and make any needed purchases right now," Eastridge said.

Farmers should plant winter wheat for forage only as a last resort, because Ohio is well past the best planting dates to get an optimal forage or grain yield in the spring, said OSU plant pathologist Pat Lipps.

"Right now, since we're in November, it's chancy that wheat will produce a reasonable crop due to the possibility of winter injury to late-planted fields," Lipps said.

Furthermore, farmers might have problems finding wheat seed this fall, Lipps said. Not much seed is available because extensive head scab infections hurt wheat yields this past season.

Farmers should also consider how much forage to plant next year as they buy seed near the end of the year, Eastridge said. They may have to increase their forage acreage to make up for this year's losses.

An alternative for some farmers may be a low-forage diet with cottonseed or byproducts from grain processors, such as soybean hulls, distiller's grain, brewer's grain, wheat middlings or corn gluten feed, Eastridge said. Ohio State researchers had good results from a ration with 33.6 percent forage and soy hulls used to limit starch level to 35 percent. Ohio State is doing more research on feeding low-forage diets.

Ohio farmers aren't the only ones facing increased forage prices, according to the USDA. Nationally, alfalfa prices increased by 12 percent from last year. Alfalfa is averaging $95.50 per ton, or a $10.50 per ton increase from 1995, USDA reported.

The Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service forecasts the state's alfalfa yields will be down by more than a half-ton this year. The service's tentative estimate is that alfalfa yielded 3.2 tons per acre compared to 3.8 tons last year. Other types of hay yielded 2.7 tons per acre compared to 2.5 tons per acre last year.

Farmland Protection Program Adds 14 Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius announced the approval of easement purchases for 14 farms encompassing 1,333 acres of prime farmland.

The 145-acre Butler County farm of Edward W. and Lorraine A. Thiele was approved, the first for the program in that county since its inception in 1994.

"These farms will be protected for future generations as a result of actions taken by the State Agricultural Land Preservation Board," said Brosius, who chairs the board. "This is a firm commitment by the commonwealth to ensure that there is adequate land for production agriculture to continue to thrive."

He commended Butler County officials for paving the way for protecting more farmland in the future with the approval of the Thiele farm.

AgrAbility Project Keeps Kempers In Farming

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The AgrAbility Project, a joint effort of Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Easter Seal Society of Central Pennsylvania, is helping farmers with disabilities to remain active in farming.

David and Marina Kemper of rural Huntingdon had a dream — that David would retire from his job as traveling salesman in 1997 and take up dairy farming full time. They purchased a 77-acre farm and got their dairy herd started. Their oldest son, Gabriel, planned to help with the operation. Their dream almost ended in May 1995 when David was rear-ended while on the road for his sales job. The accident left him with severe chronic pain, degenerative bone disease, and nerve damage. Specialists told him he eventually would be in a wheelchair.

David Kemper uses a specially constructed suspension seat with a mirror.

For a while, it seemed the dairy operation would have to be sold. Their son took a job off the farm. But the Kempers were determined to keep trying. "I really wanted to milk my cows," Kemper said. "I had a herd of heifers that were ready to milk soon and I made up my mind that I would crawl on this farm if that's what it came to."

He didn't have to crawl. Instead, he now sits upright in his tractor long enough to do a fair amount of work, thanks to a special shock-absorbing tractor seat. His regular seat brought unbearabble pain within minutes. He also has a special rear-view mirror that helps him maneuver without pain, and a skid loader that enables him to feed his livestock.

The Kempers learned about this equipment through the AgrAbility Project, managed in Pennsylvania by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Easter Seal Society of Central Pennsylvania, a subsidiary of Home Nursing Agency.

The Pennsylvania project is part of a national information and technology network for farmers, farm workers and family members who are continuing to farm despite ongoing physical or medical difficulties.

The Kempers discovered the project when attending a farm stress management workshop sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Huntingdon County. David's physicians at the Hershey Medical Center asked him to attend a stress class to help cope with his accident-related injuries.

"At the workshop, extension staff asked Marina if I would be interested in the AgrAbility Project," Kemper explained, "I said I didn't want any help, but Marina said, 'Yes.' She knows I'm a hard case."

Douglas Schaufler, AgrAbility project manager at Penn State, visited them a few days later, explained the program and left a book filled with examples of devices that have helped others remain in farming.

Kemper selected a few items he thought would help. Schaufler contacted the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation, which provided the funding for the equipment. Schaufler also recommended additional changes in his operations, such as moving milk by pipeline instead of in pails and round-baling hay for easier transportation.

"I'm so grateful that my wife told them to come. If it were up to me, I would have never asked for help. My farm would have been sold and my life's dream would have been down the drain."

For more information about the AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians project, contact Linda Fetzer at the Easter Seals office in State College (814) 238-4434 (voice and TDD access), or Doug Schaufler at Penn State, (814) 863-7868.

INTRAMUSCULAR INJECTIONS CAUSE LOSSES

Researchers have determined that intramuscular injections in cattle can cause lesions and tough spots in meat, decreasing the value of beef. Therefore, intramuscular injections should be eliminated.

In recent checkoff-funded research, heifer calves were used in a study conducted by Colorado State University to evaluate intramuscular injection reactions. Each weaning-age calf randomly received intramuscular injections of two of eight different compounds, one in the left top sirloin butt and one in the left outside round. The compounds examined were a saline preparation, a modified-live virus vaccine, a combination virus vaccine, a clostridial bacterin, a vitamin ADE mixture, an aqueous antibiotic, a macrolide antibiotic, and a long-lasting oxytetracycline antibiotic.

Most compounds administered caused an unacceptably high lesion incidence. Researchers identified a greater variation in tenderness among subprimals containing visible lesions, compared to non-injected subprimals (controls) from the right side of the same animal. Moreover, inject subprimals with non-visible lesions had greater variation in tenderness compared to non-injected subprimals. The intramuscular administration of all the compounds caused unacceptable tissue consequences.

Animal health companies are making efforts to eliminate the intramuscular injection. New pharmaceuticals are being developed utilizing the subcutaneous route of administration. Producers should make every effort to perform proper injection practices and support beef quality assurance programs.

Hog Price Forecast

Hog prices are expected to average in the mid-$50's per cwt in fourth-quarter 1996 through third-quarter 1997. Continuing strong exports, economic growth, increasing food service demand, and relatively low pork stocks are factors that should support prices over the next 15 months. However, prices may be tempered by rising supplies of competing meats.

Pork production declines will boost fourth-quarter 1996 and first-quarter 1997 prices above a year earlier. But increased production in the second and third quarters of 1997 will put prices at or below 1996. Production is expected to rise about 4 percent in fourth-quarter 1997, which will push hog prices below $50 per cwt.

Benefit Of Pre-Conditioned Calves

Calves that are "pre-conditioned" may be more valuable to the cattle feeder for several reasons. Feeding demonstrations have shown preconditioned calves will gain 45-75 pounds in the first 30 days after weaning when fed balanced grain diets with free-choice hay or pasture.

Reconditioning has added to the quality and buyer acceptance of calves sold at grouped and graded feeder calf sales. Improve feedlot performance of preconditioned calves has helped increase their demand by cattle feeders. Morbidy and mortality are decreased in preconditioned calves, especially when compared to non-preconditioned, comingled calves under stressful conditions.

For the record, preconditioning generally includes weaning, introduction to grain-based feeds, and vaccination of calves for respiratory and clostridial diseases. Most programs insist that the male calves be dehorned and properly healed. They may also require treatment for internal and external parasites and the use of growth promoting implants.

What Needle Size For Treating Hogs?

Have you ever stopped by the animal health store, picked up the needed medication and syringes, but couldn't decide what size needle you should use? You probably aren't alone.

Determining the proper needle size is important. As a rule of thumb, use the smallest needle that will get the job done. This causes less tissue damage and less backflow or leakage of the medication you are using.

Following is a handy reference to help you determine which size needle is appropriate for the job.

Intramuscular Injection	Garage	Length
Baby Pigs	18 or 20	⅝ or ½ inch
Nursery	16 or 18	¾ or ⅝ inch
Grow/Finish	16	1 inch
Breeding Stock	14 or 16	1 or 1½ inches
Subcutaneaous Injection
Nursery	16 or 18	½ inch
Grow/Finish	16	¾ inch
Breeding Stock	14 or 16	1 inch

This chart is compliments of the National Pork Producers Council's Pork Quality Assurance Program. The PQA program can help you improve management practices, avoid violative drug residues, and find ways to reduce production costs. For more information, call your local county extension office or NPPC at (515) 223-2600.

Poultry Biosecurity Meeting Set

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — "Interstate Movement of Poultry and Eggs" is the theme for this year's 11th annual regional meeting on Practical Biosecurity for Poultry Dec. 11 in its usual location — Clayton Hall on the University of Delaware campus at Newark, Del.

Registration begins at 7:30 a.m. and the program will run from 8:25 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Topics presented in the morning will include "Commerce and Biosecurity Issues" from an international and a regional perspective, "Revised Biosecurity for Delmarva," and the "Economics of Biosecurity." A video will be shown about massive dead bird composting, and a panel of poultry industry representatives will present examples of successful biosecurity programs.

The afternoon presentations will include "Practical Realities of Risk Reduction vs. Risk Elimination" by Dr. Frank Jones, Dept. of Poultry Science, North Carolina State University. Dr. Susan Trock, northern region epidemiologist for the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, will discuss live bird markets. Also included in the afternoon schedule is a discussion about the legal definition of fraud relating to the poultry industry and a presentation concerning marketing issues related to foodborne illness.

The poultry biosecurity conference is organized each year by the Mid-Atlantic Cooperative Extension Poultry Health and Management Unit (MACE), with financial support from interested trade and agribusiness organizations.

The Brillion Soil Commanders take Residue Management to the next generation of soil conservation efficiency.

The Soil Commanders are versatile tillage tools designed to meet the needs of the mid-size farmer who uses a 150-200 H.P. tractor. One of the keys to the machine's versatility is that it uses interchangeable shank legs and individually mounted disk assemblies instead of a disk gang. This makes possible a machine with disk assemblies on the front and rear of the frame with chisel plow or deep-ripper shanks on 15", 24", 27" or 30" spacings.

Rain Doesn't Stop Horse Show Fans

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — Quite a few courageous riders braved the rain on Sunday, Oct. 20, for the third schooling show in the KA Equestrian Center - Grazing Acres Farm Show Series.

Hope Woollens of Landenberg, riding High Wheeler, dominated the pleasure division, traditionally the largest division, with two blue ribbons in the three-class division.

The winner of the equitation medal, based on a rider's performance both over jumps and on the flat, was Jessica Moore of Coatesville, riding Symphony's Mandolyn.

The show moved from the indoor arena to the outdoor ring and back as the weather changed during the day, but with only slight delays for moving the loud speaker from one location to another. Judge Kathy Bradley of Port Deposit remained relaxed throughout.

The final show in the series is set for Sunday, Nov. 17, at Grazing Acres in New London. For information call (610) 255-5009 or (610) 869-0746.

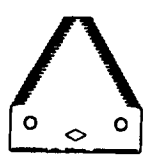
Genuine Case IH Combine Parts

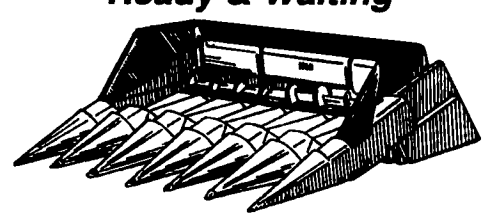
Give You a Head Start on Harvest!

Keep Cutting with Sta-Sharp™ and Super Sta-Sharp™ Sections

These self-sharpening sections deliver cleaner cutting and extra long life. Super Sta-Sharp sections feature a special course tooth profile and extra wear control.



Keep Your Nose Straight Corn Head Nose Cone Ready & Waiting



Keep Your Corn Head Far Ahead

Imitation parts just don't cut it. Only genuine Case IH corn head parts provide the fit and performance your combine requires.
Drive sprockets – made from high-strength, wear-resistant ductile iron.
Gatherer chain – provides far greater wear than imported "look-alikes."
Extended-life gatherer chain – chrome-plated pins and heavy-duty design wears 2.5 times longer than our standard chain.
Corn head knives – hard-faced with extra-thick tungsten carbide coating to stay sharp and last longer.
And be sure to replace worn corn head sprockets which may damage new chains.

The New White 6045 ROPS. When you're working in and under low overheads, this low profile 45 PTO hp tractor is a great value for today's farmer. The 6045 gives you a low profile straddle mount and a 12F/12R synchronized reverser transmission to change direction in any gear. For reliable power, there's a liquid-cooled diesel engine. And its true center line power front axle with a 50-degree turning angle helps you get around the tight spaces. Plus, the 6045 has a 2-year/2000-hour AGCO warranty on 100% parts and labor, with no deductible. Climb into a 6045 at your local White dealer. And ask about flexible Agricredit financing plans, offering low rates and waiver of interest contracts.

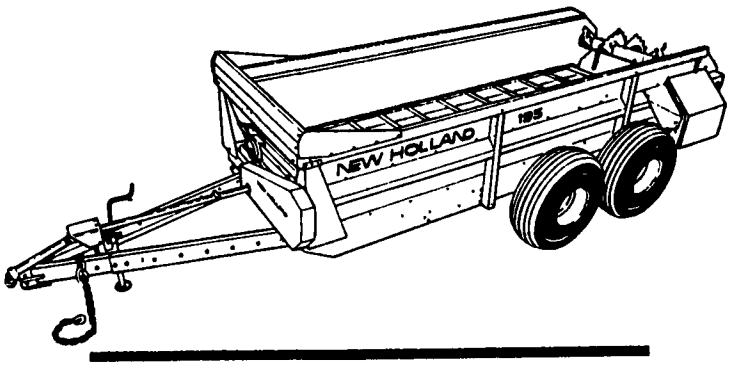
CAPACITY KING



THE BIGGEST

The New Holland Model 195 box spreader is up to your biggest spreading job.

- Capacity. The "195" takes on 410 bushels (440 cu. ft.) without flinching.
- Strong construction. Corrosion-resistant steels last and last. And an HDPE floor means smooth unloading, even in cold weather.
- Bonded Protection warranty. If the polyethylene floor fails or the sides rust, we'll replace them free for 12 years.
- Fast clean out...even with this big-capacity strong box.
- Large tandem oscillating wheels. Allow faster ground speeds in rough terrain, with less ground compaction.

Check out our biggest New Holland spreader from the biggest name in spreaders.

The new generation of Belarus. For a new generation of farmers.

Exceptional value. That's what cost conscious farmers expect from hardworking Belarus tractors. But after twenty years we feel it's time for a change. So we've updated the features and styling of our new 8000 and 9000 Series while keeping everything that makes Belarus so dependable.

Belarus Tractors From 22 HP To 100 HP

Take our new synchromesh transmission for example. It offers 14 forward and 4 reverse speeds for easy to shift power. Plus an improved turning radius provides greater maneuverability for a whole range of applications.

See your local Belarus dealer for a test drive and see for yourself.
